C. F. Kettering for Breakfast
Knudsen and Frederick
Henry Ford's New 8 Cylinder
A Church and Two Mothers

—By Arthur Brisbane—

DETROIT, March 12 — So many men and things to see in Detroit that it is hard to find even 20 minutes to write about it and get away to New York with Walter Chrysler on the Detroiter at 7 in the evening.

Breakfast at 7:30 with Charles F. Kettering, chief engineer of General Motors, at the Book-Cadillac Hotel, recently taken over by Ralph Hitz, who affects hotels and their activity as a galvanic battery affects a sleepy toad.

You couldn't put in this column half the things, worthwhile, that C. F. Kettering mentions, casually.

The automobile business is only starting. Every important industry makes its greatest progress in the second 25 years of its existence. That is true of the telephone, with its great successes achieved in the last 15 years, and true of electric light. It will prove true of the automobile industry, which is just starting its second 25-year run.

A visit to William S. Knudsen, president of the Chevrolet in the General Motors building. And a drive to his house in the country later, for a dinner at half past five.

You discuss the new enormous tire for big and little cars that is being developed by Paul Litchfield of Akron and others. Only 12 pounds air pressure, no danger of blowout.

Mr. Knudsen's remedy for dissatisfaction is to let all talk and parade to their heart's content.

Knudsen, born in Denmark, tells of old King Frederick the VII. When revolution was worrying Europe in 1848 and 49 the discontented marched toward Frederick's palace. The king heard they were coming, gave orders for all the guards to leave their posts and disappear. He was sitting in an arm chair with his gouty foot on a stool when the delegation of marchers came in. "Hello," he asked, "What do you fellows want?"

"We don't like your minister."

"Well," said the king, "I dismissed him this morning. What else can I do for you?"

That ended it, there was no revolution in Denmark.

Next, a fast run from Detroit to the Ford plant at Dearborn in a Hudson automobile, with a dictating machine built into the rear seat cushion. A letter dictated at 50 miles an hour gave a perfect record. You can use every minute in your car writing letters, or editorials or columns like this.

Henry Ford is found in the south end of his laboratory. He assures you, "No, I don't work hard, I just look around." Somebody else tells you that he has been working recently from 7 in the morning until late.

First, luncheon in the Ford dining room with Henry Ford and Mr. Sorenson, who has plenty of driving power; Mr. Cameron, who thinks and writes; Mr Cowling, general sales manager, who has just come back from flying above the fighting region in China, and R. C. "Babe" Meigs, so-called because he is six feet and a half tall. He used to sell American steam engines and threshing machines in the Argentine. He and Henry Ford discussed every engine ever made, since the first one operated in the Searpion at Alexandria, before the birth of Christ. Mr. Ford hasn't got that one, but a sample of almost every other.

For luncheon at least ten kinds of bread, including one made of soy beans, and one stuffed with raisins from California. Mr. Ford tries everything. Three kinds of pie to choose from, all these the same as the workers have in a larger dining room.

Mr. Ford tells what he thinks about conditions and what the trouble is, in few words, but on some things he doesn't care to be quoted.

Next, an examination, with Mr. Ford alone, of the new Ford models, the four and the eight-cylinder. Soon you will know all about them.

On a block with two mechanics supervising it like trained nurses watching a baby, one of the new eight-cylinder engines is running. Mr. Ford listens and says, "I'll bet it's going over 2500 revolutions." A look at the gauge shows that it is making 3500.

That engine has been running night and day for a long time. By touching a lever Mr. Ford changes the tone of the engine. He has caused it to exert 70 horsepower.

Near the big door leading from the laboratory Mr. Ford says, "Give me one of those." Takes the wheel of one of his new eight-cylinder cars and drives you down to see the new big Ford airplane. On the way

KIDNAP TRAILS IN 3 STATES

BULLETIN

Hopewell, N. J., March 12 (AP)—"No results" was the official word today from headquarters of the hunt for the Lindbergh baby and his kidnapers.

Trenton N. J. March 12 (INS)—In a formal statement today Col. H Norman Schwarzkopf, in charge of State police said the State police were now running down clues in "at least three States," but none have shed any further light on the Lindbergh baby kidnaping.

"The results of these investigations are not known," he said, "and will not be until the investigators communicate or return."

In his statement Col. Schwarzkopf said that the State police

TREASURER FOR 16 YEARS RESIGNS

Formal Announcement Made to Members of Milton Town Meeting

Announcement of a shortage of $18,000 in the Blue Hill Bank & Trust Co., and the resignation of the treasurer, was made at Milton's annual town meeting today.

The treasurer was Charles W. Rollins who served in that office 16 years.

An official statement by directors of the bank was read at the meeting by Charles S. Pierce chairman of the board, as follows:

"Irregularities in the handling of seven accounts at the Blue Hill Bank and Trust Co. were discovered a short time ago. An audit of the bank was immediately commenced by expert accountants retained by the directors.

"Apparently there is a shortage of about $18,000, as to which the bank is amply covered by insurance. The bank will make the deficiency in these accounts. The treasurer of the bank has resigned."

Rollins' home is in Norway rd., Milton.

Pierce, who is moderator of the town meeting, said he made public anouncement because two of the accounts in which irregularities were found were town accounts, amounting to $5890. These, as well as the others, will, of course, be made good, he said. His statement was accepted for the records by William B. Thurber, selectman.

CURLEY PICKING HIS SLATE

Ignoring the 5 o'clock deadline set for a peace parley between Smith and Roosevelt forces, Mayor Curley definitely announced war this afternoon and announced he would pick a Franklin D. Roosevelt slate over the week-end.

In a caustic statement on Democratic politics in general and the presidential nomination in particular, he referred to Frank J. Donahue, state chairman, as "the titular owner" of the Democratic party in the state.

Followers of Alfred E. Smith and of Franklin D. Roosevelt were to decide at 5 p. m. on a compromise with a move toward harmony or open warfare—survival of the fittest.

"I am surprised by the large number of calls I have received, tendering support from every direction," the mayor said today.

"I intend to spend tonight and

Liabilities of Bond Firm $7,644,007

Chicago, March 12 (AP)—A schedule in bankruptcy, filed today in United States District court, listed liabilities of the American Bond & Mortgage Co. at $7,644,007.

Assets were placed at $14,451,481, of which the schedule showed $10,466,647 represented by negotiable securities. Several officials of the company were convicted recently on charges of using the mails to defraud.

4 OFFICERS ARE SHOT IN RIOT

Many Chicago Radicals Are Hurt in Demonstration Against Japs

Chicago, March 12 (AP)—Four policemen were shot today as they attempted to quell a demonstration in front of the Tribune tower on North Michigan boulevard. Several radical demonstrators were injured.

A riot call was sounded when the crowd of several hundred gathered on a North Side corner and marched on the Tribune building, ostensibly to demonstrate before the Japanese consulate, located in the tower.

Several persons were injured as the police, mounted on motorcycles and horses, charged into the crowd as the first speaker mounted a stand in front of the Tribune building and began to talk.

The demonstration purported to be a protest against the Japanese occupation of Shanghai.

Traffic was disruted and the street crowd thrown into disorder as the police charged and sticks thudded on the skulls of the pedestrians. The police soon threw the crowd into retreat northward on the boulevard.

The wounded men are Sergt. Charles Kiefer, shot in the abdomen; Policemen Ray Eddy, Frank Breslin and Wilford Heller.

All the officers are attached to the Lincoln Park police force which patrols Michigan ave. north of the Chicago river.

Miss Mianne Palfrey, national indoor tennis champion, became engaged today to Arthur D. Hill, Jr., son of Boston's former corporation counsel, according to an announcement by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John G. Palfrey of 108 Ivy st., Brookline.

With her sister, Miss Sarah Palfrey, the young star is widely known in tennis and society circles.

She made her debut in the '29-'30 season as a member of the Junior League and Vincent Club and is taking part in the show of the latter at the Majestic theater.

Shrewsbury Girl Is Slain by Jilted Weston Suitor

Miami Beach, Fla., March 12 (AP)—Catherine Vervantacy, 24, of 281 Maple ave., Shrewsbury, Mass., a beauty parlor operator, was shot three times and instantly killed in a pier ballroom here today by George Younes, 54, of Weston, Mass.

Younes shot himself in the neck after killing Miss Vervantacy and is in a critical condition in a Miami hospital.

JEALOUSY BLAMED

John B. Rowland, investigator for the state attorney, said both had lived at the same hotel recently and that they were ejected Saturday for non-payment of rent.

Police said they believed Younes, said to have a wife and two children, became jealous of the woman because she broke off their friendship, and shot her when she refused to renew the acquaintance.

OTHER WOMAN HELD.

Mrs. Margaret Pearson, who refused to identify herself other than to say she is married, is here for her health, and was a companion of Miss Vervantacy, was held in jail for investigation because of threats to leave the city.

Miss Vervantacy, Mrs. Pearson and two escorts, Joseph Nairn and Walden Gray of Hialeah, were walking to the dance hall after strolling on the ocean pier outside when Younes confronted Miss Vervantacy.

She ordered him away, telling him she was "through with him," he told investigators today. He said he went to his room in Miami, got a pistol, returned to the dance hall and waited several hours before he saw her again.

BEGS TO SAVE HER

Stepping from his place of concealment, he said, he ordered her and Nairn to hold up their hands then shot once, the bullet striking her. As she fell to her knees, he fired twice, both shots taking effect.

At the hospital, Younes, not informed that Miss Vervantacy was instantly killed, begged physicians to leave him and save her life.

"If she is dead," he said, "I do not want to live."

MANY BLASTS IN MEDFORD FIRE

Fire in an automobile graveyard consumed a barn and wooden sheds at First st. and Bradbury ave., Medford, today, the billows of smoke attracting hundreds of motorists along the Fellsway.

The entire fire department of Medford was called to the scene because of the proximity of dwelling houses. Many minor explosions as gasoline tanks burst endangered firemen, but no injuries were reported.

ROSNER, LINDY AGENT, OFFICIALLY DECLARES RETURN IS NEAR

(This is the first direct official news concerning the safety of the child.)

Copyright, 1932, By the Associate Press

New York, March 12 (AP)—Morris Rosner, the "fixer" appointed by Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, announced today that he had definite knowledge that the kidnaped Lindbergh baby is alive and safe and will be returned to its parents.

Rosner came from the Lindbergh home this afternoon to his apartment at 7th ave. and 16th st. and after some hesitation agreed to see a reporter.

He said he was not able to reveal whether he had had actual conversation or other direct communication with the kidnapers, but that his statement the baby was sfae and well and would be returned was based on actual knowledge and was not in any way mere matter of opinion.

Rosner came to his apartment in the automobile of Douglas Craik of 1111 Park ave. which was driven by Craik's chauffeur. The chauffeur said Craik was a friend of Rosner and Rosner had been using the car on the Lindbergh case for a week.

"When the reporter first asked Rosner for an interview he showed great reluctance and only agreed to talk when reminded of th great public interest about the Lindbergh baby, which throughout the conversation he referred to as "our baby."

"I have some delicate work to do this afternoon and in the next few days," said Rosner. "I have been on the go for the last 103 hours with no rest. I just came home for a little relaxation, because it is absolutely imperative that I be 'sane' for this very delicate work.

"The kidnapers can be absolutely sure that nothing will ever be done otward prosecuting them either by Col. Lindbergh or myself, but we are pleading with them not to be afraid to rush negotiations. After this thing is all over they know where they can find me."

Once Rosner referred to the kidnapers as 't'hat family."

"That family made a mistake," he said. "They'll never make it again."

"Are you certain you will get the baby back?" Rosner was asked.

"There is absolutely no question about that,' 'he replied.

$250,000 RANSOM READY, SPITALE TO RUSH WEST

New York, March 12—A representative of J. P. Morgan Co., with Salvi Spitale and Irving Bitz, who are directing the underworld search for the kidnaped Lindbergh baby, will leave for Detroit tonight with $250,000, it was reported on good authority here late today. Abe Kesselman, attorney for the gangsters, will be a fourth in the party, it was said.

Spitale and Bitz were acquitted by a jury in Brooklyn federal court today of an indictment charging conspiracy to violate the prohibition laws.

After the verdict was announced reporters asked Spitale if he had any announcement to make regarding the status of the kidnaping case. He gave a negative answer. His counsel yesterday said that both Spitale and Bitz had received hundreds of tips since their designation by Col. Lindbergh as go-betweens, that one of them "looks pretty good," and that Spitale would leave for "the West" after the trial.

When reporters asked Spitale this afternoon if he was going to Detroit to follow a kidnaping tip he declined to answer.

MATCH KING A SUICIDE

Stockholm, March 12 (AP)—Ivar Kreuger, 52, head of the Swedish Match Trust and reputed to be one of the world's richest men, committed suicide in Paris, officials of the match company announced tonight. He was unmarried.

There was a bullet through the heart and a revolver lay at the side of the body.

Kreuger returned from the United States yesterday and those who saw him said he appeared to be worried and absent-minded.

The announcement read that "a superhuman burden of work resulted recently in a nervous breakdown while he was in New York. An investigation has begun into the position of the Kreuger companies."

His company, Kreuger & Toll, controls the match monopoly, with 90 manufacturing plants. He n used matches himself, preferrin lighter invented by a one-arm veteran.

THOMPSON GIRL JILTED BY JOHNSON FOR BETTY GOW

HARTFORD KIN BARE TEARFUL PARTING

"Red" Met Lindbergh Nurse in Maine, Then Began Thinking of Marriage

By JAMES J. SMITH

(Copyright, 1932, by the Boston Evening American.)

Hartford, Ct., March 12—The life and loves of Henry "Red" Johnson were subjected to further police scrutiny today with the questioning of 19-year-old Dorothy Thompson of Brooklyn, the Norwegian sailor lad's "steady" girl until Nursemaid Betty Gow came along.

Dorothy was taken from her Brooklyn home to Newark by detectives who have been checking Johnson's past in an effort to learn what persons might have obtained information about the Lindbergh household prior to the kidnaping of the colonel's heir.

VISITED HARTFORD

Dorothy was twice a visitor to this city with "Red" but that was before the fateful summer of 1930 when Betty Gow was introduced to Johnson in the village postoffice and ice cream parlor in Northhaven, Me.

It was a case of love at first sight by Red's own admission to his brother, John, of West Hartford. So enamoured did he become of Betty that he left Brooklyn, where he roomed with his oldest brother, Fred, and took up quarters in Englewood, N. J. to be near the Lindbergh nursemaid.

According to his West Hartford relatives, Dorothy learned of Henry's new romance soon after it began and called upon him for an accounting.

Henry, it is understood, told Dorothy that he was all through with the roadhouses and cabarets to which he had often accompanied her. He told her that in Betty Gow he had found a quiet, home-loving girl—just the right sort to settle down and marry after he had found a steady job.

It was a tearful parting from Dorothy, said Henry's relations, because she had grown very fond of the sailor lad. She met him through his brother, Fred, who is engaged to Dorothy's older sister, and they had made up a foursome on many a merry party at Coney Island and other places of amusement.

At the time of their meeting, Henry didn't own a car. But Fred did—and Henry and Dorothy occupied the rumble seat on their almost nightly excursions.

"Red's" relatives always believed, they said, that it was just a boy and girl affair and that Henry never mentioned Dorothy as anything more in his life than a "good sport" and a "jolly companion."

TROUBLE AHEAD

"It's a shame to keep that girl in a police station all this time just because she went around with Henry," said his brother, John. Dorothy comes from a fine family and met Henry through my older brother, Fred, who is engaged to Dorothy's sister.

"She is as innocent of any connection with the kidnaping as Henry. They are both made to suffer merely because Henry went around with Miss Gow."

An even greater misfortune than being detained in a police cell faces "Red" if he is cleared of suspicion of being involved in the kidnaping plot. Deportation proceedings are already under way which will return Henry to his native Norway as he has been revealed to have entered this country illegally.

His brother, John, said that the sailor lad made due application in Norway several years ago to be placed in the immigration quota, but was in this country when notification that it had been passed upon reached his parents' home.

PLANNED TO RETURN

[illegible] laws until the three months' time for acceptance had passed Henry receive word of the [illegible]ication, John said, and he was only disappointed that he de[illegible] to stay in this country any [illegible]

It was Henry's intention, his [illegible]rother explained, to return to Nor[illegible] if Betty Gow consented to [illegible]ry him and then go about entering the country legally so that nothing could interfere with their marriage.

The recent turn of events, however, in the lives of both Betty and Henry, has led to the belief among Henry's relations that their plans for a wedding, at least in the near future, will have to be cancelled.

Fight Fans Join in Prayers for Baby

New York, March 12 (AP)—Answering the appeal of Joe Humphries, sports announcer, a fight audience prayed last night at Madison Square Garden for the safe return of the Lindbergh baby.

Five years ago, when Col. Charles A. Lindbergh was over the Atlantic, the same Joe Humphries stood up before the Sharkey-Maloney fight and asked for prayer.

BABY GARMENT NEW CLUE IN LINDY HUNT

Evidence Found in a Cottage Shows Route of Kidnapers; Woman Blames Bootlegs

By LAURA VITRAY

Princeton, N. J., March 12—A fresh white square of baby's linen, found hanging behind the bedroom of a deserted Sourland hut, revealed today a new chapter in the swift flight of the Lindbergh baby kidnapers.

The garment, new and unlaundered, was discovered by a New York Evening Journal reporter. It had been overlooked by the state police in their hasty checkup of abandoned houses in this region.

CLUE AT COTTAGE

The green, boarded cottage is one of those that dot the maple farm section. It is owned by Antonia Crowlewsky, stalwart amazon of the mountains, who yesterday uttered her passionate "squeal" upon the Piney folk, certain of whom she boldly accused of the theft of the eaglet of Sorrel Hill.

The hut is in a direct line from the Lindbergh estate to the remote pass that leads into the rockbound, forest-screened mountain fastness. Its windows and doors had been locked and nailed, but a window frame, skillfully forced, then hastily set back in place, adds its own eloquent testimony to the story of the getaway.

Antonia, who had already pointed the hut out to investigators, led us to it herself today and took us into it to glance over its damp, uninhabited rooms.

AN IDEAL HIDEAWAY

It wore the grewsome garb of a place that human beings have long forsaken. It was a place that should have furnished a perfect hideaway for the kidnapers with their precious burden, waiting for the first streak of dawn to guide them to their mountain retreat.

"Do you think it was an outside gang, a city gang, that came up here and stole the Lindbergh, Antonia?" we asked. "You know these woods and mountains. What do you think about it all?"

Antonia's eyes narrowed. Then she suddenly groaned:

"I've said too much already. Them folks up there is a-goin' to get me for it, if I don't watch out. But I'm not afraid of them.

"They've tried to force me in on their schemes, and I ain't listened to them. So they spread the news around that I'm crazy. It don't worry me. I know what I know."

SEES MOONSHINE PLOT.

"Tell us what you know, then, Antonia. Why did they pick the Lindbergh baby to steal? What did they have against Col. Lindbergh?"

"I'll tell you, then," Antonia decided. "It's the first time my real thought has ever crossed my lips.

"I look up around you into these hills. Ever since I been here they been full of hidden stills—apple-jack stills. These fellows that live up there make a heap of money off of that stuff.

"Then along came Lindbergh, building his home up here. Flying around over these hills in a plane, inviting other fliers up here, talking of making up here his own flying field.

"He and his friends could fly right over those stills and take a peek down at them. It's not so good at all for Lindbergh to be spoiling the applejack business. So the folks want Lindbergh to get out of here. Then they decides to kidnap the baby, and that'll make him go."

Pledge Secrecy in a Police Circular

Hopewell, N. J., March 12 (AP)—The police circular being distribute throughout the United States, pledging confidential treatment of any information the Lindbergh kidnaping, bears a picture of golden-haired Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr.

It is being printed in Washington, the state police announced, but it was not known whether some federal agency prepared it.

The appeal for information, regardless of the source, was interpreted by newspapers as an effort to clear the way for overtures from the kidnapers. Col. Lindbergh has promised he would not try to harm them if they entered negotiations, but no intimation of the police attitude has hitherto been given.

The statement announcing the circular said the police have not had "any communication with the kidnapers."

Missing Man Hunted in Lindbergh Mystery

Hopewell, N. J., March 12 (AP)—Police are searching for a former Brooklyn grocer, Dominick Peruo, who lives on the edge of the Lindbergh estate, but has not been seen since the night before the kidnaping.

A 16-year-old son told state troopers Peruo went away with a relative and he hadn't heard from him.

U. S. TO HELP IN FORCING JAPS OUT OF CHINA

Stimson Notifies the League of Willingness to Co-operate for Evacuation

By HOBART C. MONTEE
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Washington, March 12 (INS)—The "day of reckoning" for the Japanese Government as a consequence of its military rampage in China seemed to have dawned today.

The United States is ready to join with Great Britain, France and Italy to arrange for evacuation of Japanese troops from Shanghai under the plan adopted at yesterday's session of the League of Nations assembly in Geneva.

The American decision to co-operate was communicated to the League's secretary-general, Sir Eric Drummond, today by Secretary of State Stimson.

JAPS VOTED DOWN.

The League resolution, while not outrightly declaring Japan the aggressor in the Sino-Japanese conflict, did place her distinctly on the defense.

It swept aside Japanese assertions that the League assembly was not qualified to consider the Sino-Japanese dispute by declaring the "provisions of the covenant are entirely applicable to the dispute."

State Department leader from the first have held that Japanese aggression in China could not be maintained permanently in the face of solidified world opposition.

The difficulty has been to obtain a united front against the Japanese military action, the large military powers represented on the league council being particularly reluctant to come out flatfooted in opposition to Japan.

U. S. POLICY UPHELD

Sec. Stimson therefore was particularly pleased with the action of the assembly, largely as a result of the pressure brought upon the larger powers by the small nations represented in the assembly.

The assembly's resolution has the effect of outlawing Japanese occupation of both Manchuria and the Shanghai area, and, in the opinion of State Department officials, spells defeat for the Japanese-supported independent government of Manchuria, of which Henry Pu-Yi, China's "boy emperor," has been made the puppet head.

Officials here do not anticipate the League resolution will have any magic powers for effecting immediate withdrawal of Japanese forces from either Shanghai or Manchuria. They expect long-drawn-out negotiations, with both Japanese and Chinese diplomats jockeying for position and the last ounce of advantage to be obtained from the situation.

But American observers do believe the stage has now been set for eventual settlement of the Far Eastern crisis along lines of treaty observance and maintenance of the "open door" policy which have been the keynotes of this government's steadfast position.

Woman Non-Voters Are Shirkers, Rep. Norton Says

Mary. A. Norton

Washington, March 12 — The women who fails to vote is shirking her duty and is a greater menace to the country than a Communist, Representative Mary T. Norton, Democrat, of New Jersey, stated in a radio speech.

"No government is free with one-half of its citizens using the ballot," Rep. Norton declared. "No woman would dare be as careless of her personal fortune as some are of the business of their country."

She went on to say that Communists, mostly alien-partial, decry the government because of personal grievances, whereas American women who do not vote are failing to support the government and yet expecting American rights.

Lord Butterfield Bans Wife's Debut in Politics

Lady Butterfield

London, March 12—Lady Butterfield may be the most capable woman in the world but, according to Lord Butterfield, her husband, she is not yet ready to enter the political field.

Lady Butterfield, the former Hilda Johnston, of Milwaukee, Wis., was unanimously elected president of the Keighley, Yorkshire, Women's Conservative Association. She was all ready to take office.

But Lord Butterfield informed the association that her knowledge of politics was very slight, and he thought someone better equipped should be selected. After a domestice conference, Lady Butterfield resigned.

NO NEIGHBOR IN LINDY PLOT

Flemington, N. J., March 12 (INS)—Hunterdon County authorities have searched the Sourland hill country around the Lindbergh home and are convinced nobody living there had anything to do with the kidnaping of the Lindbergh baby.

Sheriff Wean made this announcement today. He said County Detective Elmer C. Hann had been spending all his time in the hills since the kidnaping.

"Hann knows that country better than any man living," the sheriff said. "He has proved it for months at a time looking for criminals, and has twice solved murder mysteries there. He is satisfied and we are satisfied that none of the regular residents of the section were involved in the kidnaping."

Wean said the investigation had been conducted independently of state police activities.

Justice Department Gives Full Aid to the Search

Washington, March 12 (AP)—The Department of Justice disclosed today it had distributed the appeal of New Jersey State police for co-operation of police officials over the country in finding Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr.

J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Bureau of Investigation, said his department had made its distribution facilities available at the request of Col. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, chief of the New Jersey State police.

It was understood, however, the department did not aid in preparing the circular.

Across the top of the appeal for help in finding the kidnaped child are two of his photographs. Officials said they were not clear but were the best snapshots available.

Some of the circulars went out last night and others were put in the mails this morning.

The Bureau of Investigation is in constant touch with police chiefs in more than 1400 cities and probably has the most complete mailing list of law enforcement authorities in the country.

U. S. Liner Searched at Hamburg for Lindy, Jr.

Hamburg, Germany, March 12 (AP)—Detectives went aboard the steamer President Roosevelt when she docked this afternoon to investigate reports the Lindbergh baby was on the ship.

They found some babies but not the one they sought.

TRAIL OF BABY KIDNAPERS SOUGHT IN THREE STATES

guarantee of confidence in all persons wishing to furnish information about the kidnaping did not carry with it a guarantee of immunity to the kidnapers.

"The matter of immunity is beyond our control," he said.

Disclosure that a circular had been sent to every police headquarters in the country appealing for information and promising secrecy had led to interpretation in some quarters that in effect immunity was being extended to the criminals.

"Our guaranty of confidence concerning informants," Col. Schwarzkoff said, "is an expression of our sincerity concerning our efforts to obtain information which would result in the return of the baby."

The question of immunity has cropped up repeatedly since the Lindbergh baby was stolen the night of March 1 and numerous officials, including the governor of the state, have said that it was impossible to make such a promise, which in effect would be to declare crime legal.

HUNT IN 3 STATES.

The nearest possible thing to a promise of immunity is Col. Lindbergh's appeal to the kidnapers in which he promised to meet their terms and to maintain complete secrecy if they would return his child.

Referring to the hunt in three states, the official statement said:

"The status of the investigation has not revealed any information of a productive nature in the past 24 hours. Many of the investigators are at present on assignments which have extended in at least three other states, and have not returned. The results of their investigations are not known and will not be until they communicate or return.

"If their investigations develop any details of importance or value to this investigation or to the press we will be pleased to transmit the same in our next bulletin."

With scores of clues proving to be short-lived and ephemeral and the police at their wits' end for a new and definite "lead," the nationwide search for the kidnaped Lindbergh baby centered today in New York city. It was the 11th day of the heart-rending quest for the missing child.

PRISONER HOLDS LIMELIGHT

Over at the Tombs, New York's famous bastile, a prisoner—as yet unidentified—came in for considerable attention by the police. According to semi-official information he was taken out of the Tombs late yesterday and accompanied to Hopewell, N. J., for questioning in the Lindbergh mystery.

The prisoner, now in custody on a charge unrelated to kidnaping, is reported to be suspected of being one of five men involved in the plot to spirit away the Lindbergh infant. Another of the five men is understood to be in prison elsewhere.

Identity of the tombs prisoner was closely guarded. Joseph Fishman, deputy commissioner of corrections, declared that any premature information of this "clue" would "kill the effectiveness of our work."

Another development in New York city was a mysterious conference, reported scheduled for today in a mid-town hotel. According to this rumor—wholly without confirmation, however—representatives of the police department and an attorney said to represent Detroit gangsters were to be present.

Little credence was placed in a rumor that Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, father of the missing infant, would attend the conference.

Dorothy Thompson, another friend of Henry (Red) Johnson, was questioned several hours at Newark yesterday, it was learned, but she was not detained. Johnson, sailor who was friendly with the baby's nurse, Betty Gow, is held at Newark, facing a charge of entering the country illegally.

Newark police who questioned Miss Thompson and were reported to have learned of several trips she took with Johnson, friend of Betty Gow, Lindbergh nursemaid, were evasive when questioned about this development.

"She is a guest of the city of Newark and will remain a guest of the city until all the information she has regarding Henry Johnson is obtained," one official said.

Johnson, now detained in Newark charged with illegal entry into the country, took her to two roadhouses and on other social trips, Miss Thompson was reported to have informed Deputy Police Chief Brex of Newark.

He refused to discuss her testimony, however.

"Dorothy Thompson is not a prisoner, never was a prisoner and is not here (Newark police headquarters)," he replied to newspapermen's questions.

"She is not a prisoner any place, and was not picked up by New York police."

LINDBERGHS HOPEFUL.

Lindbergh, "still gritty and still hopeful," is staying close to his home in Hopewell, where for days and nights he has been personally directing efforts of an army of private detectives and friends to find his child.

His wife, Mrs. Anne Lindbergh, was reported today to be bearing up bravely although in a run-down condition as a result of a severe cold and the ordeal she is undergoing.

The Lindberghs, advices from Hopewell say, are "just waiting, watching, waiting—and hoping."

Nothing in the way of real progress has been definitely disclosed to the press, despite the optimistic reports that have cropped up from time to time since the baby was stolen from his crib a week ago last Tuesday night.

The police, chagrined at their inability to cope with the mystery, have been testy and tight-lipped almost to the point of precipitating an open break with the press. Newspaper men, an army of whom are swarming all over western New Jersey, have been eager to co-operate with the authorities, but their efforts to obtain information concerning the progress of the investigation have been met with an official curtness that has evoked a coolness on both sides.

PLOT WELL CONCEIVED.

New Jersey's police, however, have been unremitting in their efforts to solve the mystery. Police have been working night and day. Not even their severest critics fail to credit them with putting forth their greatest efforts. The kidnaping plot, apparently, was well executed. It is known that capable police officials are still adhering to one of their original theories that the kidnaping might have been "an inside job" and are conducting their investigation accordingly.

The territory within ten miles of the Lindbergh home was being combed again today by police, private detectives and reporters for clues. In a summer cottage in the hills back of Hopewell a reporter found a square white cloth hanging behind a door. The cottage had been broken into, apparently, as a window sash had been torn away and replaced. This "clue" precipitated a reorganized and systematic search in that vicinity.

Interest in the reported conference in New York city centered on whispers that Detroit gangsters were to be represented. Detroit has figured prominently in the investigation because of intimations that the baby might be returned to his grandmother, Mrs. Evangaline L. Lindbergh, who lives there.

Col. Henry Breckinridge, Lindbergh's close friend and adviser, left Hopewell early today for New York. This gave rise to speculation as to whether or not he would attend the reported conference.

SPITALE HUNT FUTILE

Col. Lindbergh's move in naming Salvatore Spitale and Irving Bitz of New York to act as "go-betweens" with the underworld for the return of the baby has thus far met with no success, so far as known.

Spitale made it plain he is not interested in police conferences. He said, after accepting the task of intermediary, that he was not playing the role of detective and that he is not interested in tracking down the kidnapers. His only desire is to establish contact with the kidnapers, meet their demands and obtain the baby.

The name of Morris Rosner, who has been injected into the case in some mysterious manner, continues to crop up with the investigation. Rosner is a "man of mystery." He bobs up in the investigation now and then but no one seems to know what part he is playing. He is said to have "connections" through which he may obtain useful information.

New Jersey police have issued a nation-wide appeal for assistance in the search. Circulars have gone from the headquarters of Col. H. Norman Schwarzkoff of the New Jersey state police to the police departments of all cities in the United States, seeking information about the baby, and pledging secrecy to those who give it.

EXCLUSIVE! RIVAL OF BETTY GOW QUIZZED

he takes you over a dirt road purposely made rough for experiment, says, "I won't frighten you. I just want to show you." And runs you over that rough road of the rolling stones and sand, about 70 miles an hour.

The big airplane, its monoplane of metal spreading more than half the length of a New York city block, is a giant to satisfy any imagination, and it will carry 40 passengers. The British recently finished their biggest plane to carry 38 passengers from London to South Africa.

Three Hispano engines will run this air giant, which can draw in its landing legs and wheels to prevent air resistance.

Two engines built into the wing on each side of the fuselage are of 650 horsepower each. On top, towering above the plane, is an 18-cylinder engine of 1150 horsepower. Fastened throughout every part of the structure as the roots of a tree fasten it to the ground. The rear end of the engine tapers to a sharp point, to let the wind slip away. That idea is borrowed from a falling raindrop, which, according to German scientists, offers the minimum of resistance to the air, being big at the falling end, pointed at the upper end.

Harry Russell, young pilot, who will soon take this air giant off the earth, "simply can't wait."

Henry Ford talks as little about his new cars as a well-trained husband and father who has been told by his wife, "Please don't talk about the children. There they are, look at them," is all he says.

He is particularly interested in a tiny engine made for his factories in England and the cars to be built there.

British automobile taxes are unlike ours. The smaller the engine the less you pay.

This engine is about the size of a stovepipe hat, has a "bore" no bigger than a baby's wrist, develops 20 horsepower, and will drive a car 58 miles an hour.

The new car whirls you to the Ford Museum, with its many buildings, including a reproduction of Independence Hall in Philadelphia and the Edison laboratory in which the electric light bulb was perfected more than 50 years ago. The laboratory and all the machinery were removed from Orange, New Jersey. Mr. Jehl, who worked there with Edison, 53 years ago, explains things.

There is the small brick school house that Henry Ford attended when he was a boy, and the railroad station that used to stand at Smith's Creek. Ford was put out of it for setting fire to something. Don't be discouraged if your boy is mischievous. There is a little old tintype photograph gallery that takes your picture with your head resting classically on your thumb and forefinger, an iron claw at the back of your head.

And there is the beautiful white church made of bricks that were in the house where Mr. Ford's wife was born, the house in which they married.

Every morning boys from the Ford school conduct their own services in this church.

Detroit is an interesting city, and Henry Ford is an interesting man. The ice will bear on the lake near his laboratory and he is going skating tomorrow.

U. S. Will Ask Capone for His Plans in Baby Hunt

BULLETIN

Newark, March 12—Max Silverman, Newark, head of a bonding agency, announced a plane was in readiness to take him to Chicago at a moment's notice to bail out "Scarface" Al Capone, should the racketeer king's offer to hunt for the baby, if released from Federal jail, be accepted. Silverman said he had $200,000 cash ready for the purpose.

Washington, March 12 (US)—Al Capone will be asked to inform the government at once what plan he may have in mind to search for the kidnaped Lindbergh baby.

The gangster's unique proposal that he be given freedom on bail to aid in the nationwide hunt was discussed informally by President Hoover and his cabinet.

Capone's proposal was not taken seriously and it was agreed that unless he makes known some definite plan no more attention will be paid to him.

An answer from Capone is expected today.

Attorney General Mitchell said after discussing the matter with the President:

"As yet we have no proposition before us officially. If such a proposal is advanced, we would have to refer it to the circuit court of appeals, before which Capone's case is now pending. Capone and his affairs are at present outside our jurisdiction."

The Circuit Court has previously rejected Capone's plea for release under bond pending his appeal from the 11-year sentence, and as yet Capone's lawyers have not appealed this phase of the case to the United States Supreme Court.

Another hitch in the case would come from the revenue bureau, which has been seeking Capone's assets in order to collect $336,000 back income taxes. Officials expressed keen interest in the offer to post a sizable bond, as they say he has been telling them that he has no money with which to satisfy the judgment.

Officials also expressed interest as to where Capone would obtain the $10,000 reward which he has offered for the return of the child. They added that should Capone post a large bond the government would file a lien on it to satisfy its claims.

Changes in Postal Service Anounced

Patrick F. McGovern has been changed from superintendent at the Brighton postal station to foreman of carriers at the Burlington ave. annex, exchanging places with Michael Burke, it was announced today by Postmaster Hurley.

The postal station at 716 Hancock st., Wollaston, William T. Chambers, clerk, has been discontinued.

A gunman, who spoke softly in a cultured voice and who said "please" when giving his victm instructions, held up Samuel Arkins in his dry goods store at 52A Bennington st., East Boston, locked Arkins in a closet and escaped last night with the $69 the cash drawer contained.

5 HURT ON WAY TO VISIT DEAD

En route to the home of a Rockland woman, who had died, two of the woman's brothers and three other men were pinned beneath their automobile today when it overturned at Liberty and Pleasant st., Rockland.

They were driving to the home of Mrs. Katherine Toomey, 50, of Liberty st., who died early today.

Patrick Bowler, 40, Mrs. Toomey's brother, and Partick O'Leary of Edwin st., Dorchester, were taken to Brockton Hospital suffering serious injuries.

Thomas Bowler, 42, another brother, also of Edwin st., Dorchester; Joseph P. Flaherty of Greenwood st. and John A. Golden of Robertson st., both of Quincy, suffered minor hurts.

Police said Flaherty was driving and tried to avoid another machine, sending his car into a skid.

Police Radio Rounds Up 3 in Somerville

Somerville's new police radio today was responsible for the arrest of three men four minutes after they are alleged to have attempted passing a counterfeit $10 bill in a Marshall st. store.

Those arrested are Charles Adolino, of Salem st., North End, and Daniel and Constanti Brogna, of Princeton st., Somerville. They are held on a larceny charge pending federal investigation.

HARVARD GIN-E TAKEN, TOO, AT PUNCHE BOUT

Cruel Law-e Swoop-e Down-e on Friday Night-e Song-e Fest-e and Grabe Drink-e

Ye olde wassail bowl is missing today from its accustomed place in the very center of ye olde rounde table at Ye Stylus Clubbe of Harvard, and among Ye Knights of the Punche there is wailing, with gnashing of molars.

Ye olde wassail bowl, with its contents of old rumme and gin and tea in equal parts, together with three bottles of gin extra dry, is in the hands of the police.

For last night, which was a night of the punch for the Knights of the Punche, ye coppers descended in force on Ye Stylus Clubbe at 16 Elliot st., Cambridge, and merriment and punch were dispensed with in one fell swoop.

IN BIG SONG FEST

The clubbe, which numbers among its members some of the most prominent of Harvard students, was raided, no less, and bowl and bottles confiscated, and if there is less punch in the bowl at the police station today than there was when bowl and punch were seized—why a fellow can't help spilling a little, can he?

John W. Roberts, the English caretaker of the club who also does odd jobs like washing out the glasses and slicing lemons, told today of the descent of the law in the shape of Sergt. Charles H. Presho and six lesser minions, and of the cause.

"The boys were having their regular Friday night gathering with a big song fest," said he. "At one time there were 35 or 40 students in the house. They broke out in song with their feet on the table and the old wassail bowl set in front of them.

THEIR ONE MISTAKE.

"I do admit the singing was a little loud, but the boys were just having a good time, as boys will, especially students.

"Some boys thought it would be a good idea to transfer their vocal efforts to the front porch, and I guess that was a mistake."

The error lies mainly in the fact that the Harvard sq. police station is directly opposite the club, and that the Harvard sq. police don't appreciate ye goode olde songs nobly and loudly sung, in public at late hours. Nor do sleepy neighbors.

The police took names, punch, gin and bowl and left a warning.

Students say that among ye officers of Ye Stylus Clubbe are William B. Bacon, of Jamaica Plain, member of ye varsity crew and son of Senate President Bacon; Philip Boyer, Jr., of Manhasset, N. Y., ye varsity baseball player, and Howard Lapsley, of Beford, N. Y., president of Ye Harvard Crusaders, an anti-prohibition organization.

HOAX DEATH TO BE REOPENED

The inquest into the death of Elizabeth B. Cook, 20, of Brookline, victim of the "international hoax mystery," will be reopened at Gibraltar Tuesday.

A chemist who examined the girl's organs, the American consul and the port surgeon will be called to testify.

Miss Cook died on Feb. 7 on the S. S. Chinese Prince off Gibraltar en route from Naples to Boston to wed St. George T. Arnold, young engineer. Before sailing she received two hoax telegrams at Naples advising her of the "death" of Arnold.

Her mother and sister, who arrived in Boston from Naples on Feb. 24, joined with Brookline relatives in an official statement attributing her death to pneumonia, and making no mention of the source of the hoax messages. Cable advices from Gibraltar said traces of drugs had been found in the victim's body.

ALICIA RODGERS IS NOT TO WED

Rome, March 12 (AP)—A prospective international romance with a title involved has fallen through, at least for the moment, it developed today.

The Marquisa Solari, wife of the head of the Marconi Company of Italy, denied reports that her son, Alonzo, had eloped on Wednesday with Miss Alicia Rodgers, granddaughter of the late United States ambassador to Italy, George von L. Meyer.

"There has been no marriage and there won't be any," the mother said, explaining that one reason was that the young marquis is doing military service.

The boy's father described the reports of the elopement as "absolutely false," adding that his son was ill and under his care.

Miss Rodgers is 18 and lives in Rome with her grandmother.

Co-Eds' Ire Stirred by Editorial Rap at Morals

Evanston, Ill., March 12 (INS)—An editorial, impugning the virtue of Northwestern University co-eds, engendered a storm of discussion and bitter resentment on the campus today.

Declaring that the high evaluation of chastity among Northwestern students was created "more by the scarcity than the demand," the editorial appeared in yesterday's Daily Northwestern, undergraduate newspaper. Its author was Jack Leach, chairman of the paper's editorial board.

Within a few hours after its appearance the editorial occasioned vigorous expressions of resentment from various student organizations and prompted the launching of a faculty investigation.

Prof. F. H. Heidbrink, chairman of the student publications committee, called Leach and questioned him at length. The professor indicated the faculty would take action.

After denying that a majority of Northwestern's girl students possess virtue, the editorial concludes that:

"If the price of intelligent appreciation were the loss of chastity, it would be well worth it—for the average student loses the one without gaining the other."

SALEM HUBBY SAYS HE STOLE FOR WIFE

Loot Found in Home When the Police Are Called as Result of Family Row

Watches, gems and women's clothing, allegedly stolen in a long series of breaks, were recovered today in the home of Alfred Petrault, 21, of Horton pl., Salem—all because Petrault, his bride and his mother-in-law had an argument.

Petrault later confessed to six breaks, according to the police, and said he stole to get his bride beautiful things which his salary would not buy.

A quarrel caused him to leave his wife a week ago, police declare. Early today he turned up at home again and started moving furniture he claimed as his.

A wordy argument followed, Petrault upholding one side and his wife and her mother, Mrs. Catherine Reagan, on the other. The older woman finally called police.

When officers arrived, somebody hurled the epithet "Thief," the police allege, and the result was a search of the house and the finding of watches, other jewelry and women's finery.

The total value was place at "more than $1000" by the police.

After being taken to headquarters Petrault made his admissions, it is alleged, and a charge of breaking and entering was placed against him.

HARVARD MAN DIES IN CRASH

William A. Love, Jr., of Scituate, a Harvard student, was dead at Rockville, Ct., today and Miss Elizabeth B. Anderson of Back Bay, a student at New England Conservatory of Music, was in Rockville Hospital as the result of an automobile accident while the couple were en route to New York.

Love, who lived with Dr. E. F. Bowman of Scituate, was killed instantly when he was pinned beneath the big car. He is the son of a Honolulu banker.

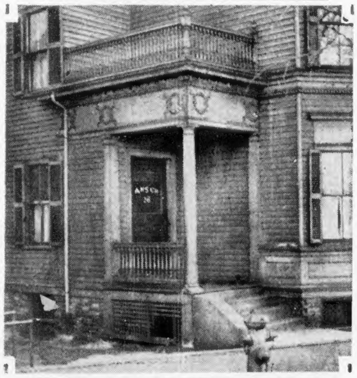
Miss Anderson was thrown clear of the machine and suffered lesser injuries. She lives at 268 Newbury st., Back Bay.

Both Love and Miss Anderson came here from Hawaii. They left early yesterday to attend a social affair last night at Vassar College, Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

Love was in his fourth year of a five-year course in engineering and business

Love was a member of the Harvard swimming team during his regular course at the university. He made his home at Dr. Bowman's summer home in Scituate during the winter months when Dr. Bowman was at his two offices on Bay State rd and Newbury st., Back Bay.

RAIDED! Too Much Noise Gets Harvard Stylus Club in Police Record LIQUORS FOUND HERE



YE STYLUS CLUB INVADED BY THE LAW

WHERE HARVARD REVEL WAS FULL BLAST WHEN POLICE ARRIVED

The cup that cheers cheered too lustily for the decorum of the sedate neighborhood when Ye Stylus Clubbe, Eliot st., Cambridge, fashionable Harvard organization, put on a show in the wee sma' hours today, police assert. So the place was raided and police seized liquors and the historic bowl from which they were stirred and sipped, and took names of many gay, young bloods who were having a joyous Friday night song-fest. Photo shows a quiet nook in the clubbe that was not at all quiet at the time. (Staff photo.)

MAKES 10 TRIPS TO GET HIS SON

Ten trips to Cambridge from his home in Roslindale were necessary before he obtained his five-year-old son from his first wife, who had had the child for five weeks, Dr. Frank J. Cruickshank of Roberts st., Roslindale, testified today in Suffolk probate court.

Mrs. Chrissie I. Cruickshank, divorced wife, is suing for custody of the child.

An attentive spectator in the courtroom was the second Mrs. Cruickshank, who has filed a petition for divorce, charging cruelty.

The son, Frank J., Jr., was turned over to him when an agreement was signed by both, Dr. Cruickshank stated. The agreement was to the effect that he was to have the boy until such time as his first wife wanted to see him, and that the $7.50 weekly payments for the boy's support would not be paid while he had the boy.

The suit has been on trial before Judge McCoole at different times during several weeks.

Clarence E. Huson Dies Suddenly

Word was received here today of the death of Clarence E. Huson, Philadelphia manager for Doremus & Co., who passed away in his sleep at his home at Strafford, Pa.

Mrs. Huson has been with Doremus & Company for the past six years, starting with the Boston office in 1925. He was a graduate of Mt. Hermon and of Harvard University, class of 1923.

He is survived by his wife, Mabel Elliot Huson, and son, Robert.

MRS. WOOD, RICH RECLUSE, DIES

New York, March 12 (INS)—Mrs. Ida E. Wood, 93-year-old recluse, died today of pneumonia.

The aged woman, lived for 18 years in a hotel room, in the heart of Manhattan without once leaving its borders. In the room she had nearly a million dollars in cash and bonds secreted.

Her nephew, Otis F. Wood, who was appointed her guardian last summer, was at her bedside when she died.

Over the vigorous opposition of Mrs. Wood he had forced her to move into larger quarters where medical care and attention could be provided.

Vote Recount in Arlington Today

A recount is being held in Robbins Memorial Town Hall in Arlington, today, of the votes cast for selectmen at the town election last Monday. On, the original count Leonard Collins won the election, with 6044 votes, defeating Hollis M. Gott, chairman of the board the past year, who sought re-election, by 151 votes.

Week-End Will Be Fair and Warmer

The March lion drove the lamb to cover again early today, but it won't be severely cold over the week-end, according to the weather bureau, and it will be dry and fair. The humidity reading is exceptionally low, 47 per cent.

DOPE FIEND HAS BABY, BOSTON LETTER SAYS

Drug addicts kidnaped the Lindbergh baby, have the child in Minneapolis now and will soon take him to Moose Jaw, Saskatchewan, Canada, according to a letter received today at the U. S. marshal's office in the federal building.

The child is in the care of a mulatto woman and has been stained as a disguise, the writer declares. It was on letter paper, unsigned and was mailed in Boston, being postmarked 7:30 p. m. yesterday.

LETTER GIVES CLUES

Numerous names are mentioned in the letter which reads as follows:

"U. S. Marshal's Office,
"Boston, Mass.
"Dear Sir:

"This letter will inform you that Lindbergh's baby arrived in Minneapolis Sunday morning. He is in the red light district. A mulatto woman is taking care of him. He has been stained.

"Honkie's mob done this job. Bobbie H. got the kid from the room. The baby was planted in a small salesman's trunk inside the car, and they went around Chicago. They stopped only for gas and oil.

"Mr. A. (the "Bald-faced Kid") is waiting in N. Y. City for the pay-off. Close to S. "Baldy" weighs about 170, small scar on left cheek, light complexion, third best card cheater in the world, always lives at the best hotels; blue eyes; also has a tough hop habit; headquarters, Moose Jaw, Sask.

"Bobbie H. arrested Hot Springs, Ark., for prowl lawyer's room in hotel, 1919. Also record in Calgary for cannon touch. Bobbie is slender, weighs about 140, dark, straight nose, good-looking, plenty of guts.

"These names may help you around Minneapolis. P., a Jew. B. P., hophead, con man; record Regina jail. "Rusty" and wife, Florence. J. P., con man supreme. "The Suey Kid," gambler—peanuts gambler. N. S., gypsy, whiteslaver. J. R., released Ionia, Michigan, about 1917, 1918, safeblower, German extraction, plenty of moxie. "S. the Bear," con man, one of the best. "Red" K., con man.

FACING "TOUGH JOB"

"The chief is right with the mob. Don't let him in or you will get nowhere. Also N. W. Mounted. They don't know the war is over. Although they have a line on Honkie, also B. Z., the bankroll man of Moose Jaw, the next move is to get the baby to Moose Jaw. When the roads get better. They will have to pass through Minot, N. D. but will go by a secret trail to the left or west of Portal.

"I do not expect to live to be 70 years of age after giving this information. So I enclose half a Treasury ticket for identification. My wife will present the other half for the reward. See that she gets plenty of protection.

"The reason I am not giving my name and address at this time is that you will have to have some very good breaks to get the baby alive. You are up against Morphine Brains, and these boys don't figure that they are going to fail. So if the baby is found dead I am in a tough spot. The Mob, the U. S. Secret Service—and me in the middle.

The letter enclosed half a lottery ticket on the Treasury balance, as referred to by the writer.

AGED MAN SUES MALDEN BOARD OF WELFARE

In the oddest petition within the memory of the Cambridge court clerk, a Malden man today asked Supreme Court to compel the Malden Welfare Board to furnish him assistance under the old-age assistance act.

Vito Macrillo, 75, of 157 Pearl st., Malden, filed the petition through a Boston attorney.

It asks a writ of mandamus against Joseph W. Proctor, David P. Rossiter and Albert W. Lovejoy, members of the Malden board, and Owen E. Rooney, Malden director of old-age assistance.

Macrillo said he had a large family, all of whom were of adult age but unable to assist him.

He charged that Rooney informed him by letter in December that he was rated a "non-deserving citizen" and that the welfare board refused him because his wife left him in 1920.

The petition was filed with the superior court clerk in Cambridge for delivery to Supreme Court.

DEMOCRAT FUND IS $555,000

New York, March 12 (AP)—Chairman John W. Davis of the Democratic victory campaign announced today that a total of $555,000 in cash and pledges had been received or reported toward the work of the Democratic national committee up to yesterday.

The money represented gifts and contributions from 45,817 men and women.

Besides the $219,058 in actual cash receipts reported today, Davis said, the treasurer's statement filed in Washington recorded pledges totaling $204,158, including Chairman John J. Rascob's conditional pledge of $100,000, and a convention pledge of $75,000 in addition to the $125,000 already contributed by the Chicago citizens' committee.

LINDBERGH CLUE GIVEN POLICE

Boston police received another Lindbergh clue today when a woman reported seeing two men, a woman and a baby in an automobile in Beacon st.

She told Patrolman John Gonella of Joy st. station that the car stopped and the driver asked a pedestrian for directions. As she passed, she noticed that the child was ill, and she thought the two men in the front seat eyed her suspiciously.

She said the registration numbers were 62,615, but she did not know what state. It was a big car with a convertible top.

Quincy had a Lindbergh baby hunt early today. A man about 35, carrying a baby, hired a taxicab and rode around trying to find accommodations in various lodging houses, but all were full.

He then left the baby at a house in Wollaston. Investigation showed he was a family man, who decided to end a quarrel with his wife by leaving home, taking the baby to a relative's.

CURLEY PICKS 'WAR' SLATE

tomorrow on a slate for Roosevelt."

He said he received a call from Councillor Edward J. Sennott of Cambridge with suggestion that city and town committees meet to promote harmony.

"I told him a better scheme would be to communicate with the titular owner of the Democratic party in this state—Mr. Frank Donahue."

Curley said he would speak tonight before the Women's Auxiliary of the Hibernians and the Clover Club.

GREEN LEFT OUT

Rumblings among Smith followers came from Charlestown over the failure to recognize Councillor Thomas H. Green on the Smith slate of yesterday.

Green is chief lieutenant of Martin Lomasney and was a Smith delegate in 1924 and 1928.

Gov. Roosevelt has not yet entered the political cauldron here but his son and Lewis H. Howe, his personal secretary, have met several times with Mayor Curley.

The latter told both representatives of the New York governor that he has proposed the Roosevelt forces indorse Smith until he is eliminated at the Chicago convention in June on the promise that the Smith delegation will then throw its entire support to Roosevelt.

Indicative of the stand-pat attitude of the Smith group was the reaction of Chairman Frank J. Donahue of the state committee, who holds Smith's power of attorney, to the compromise demands.

DECISION FINAL

Donahue made it plain that the filing of the Smith slate settled the question once and for all, and that the time for agreements had gone by.

And it is no secret that the Smith supporters, who regard the Roosevelt threat of battle as senseless, are fully prepared to put the blame for any damage that is done the party on Mayor Curley's shoulders, and indirectly on the New York governor's.

It is claimed that the mayor has already drawn up a slate of his own to put in the field, and that nomination papers have actually been taken out by Frank X. Quigley of Holyoke and Mayor Murphy of Somerville.

If the Curley slate is actually filed, it will line up against one of the strongest aggregations in the history of the Democratic party in this state.

LEADERS INCLUDED

As stressed by Chairman Donahue, the Smith delegates-at-large, chosen after many conferences and careful deliberation, embrace outstanding leaders of the democracy.

Included in the group is the governor of the state, the two United States senators, all the Democratic congressmen, the district attorney from Suffolk county, Gen. Cole, nominee for governor in 1928; former Mayor Fitzgerald, candidate for United States senator in 1916 and for governor in 1922.

Also Dr. Helen I. McGillicuddy, vice-chairman of the state committee, and Mrs. Helen G. Rotch, prominent child welfare, penology and public health worker.

No representative list of Democrats, in Donahue's opinion, could be drawn up without including most, if not all, of these names.

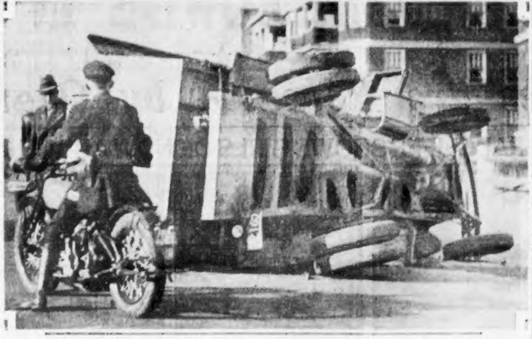
The district delegates selected, as well as alternates, include men and women outstanding in their communities, representing the Legislature, heads of municipalities and the racial and war veteran groups.

The greatest difficulty, Donahue said, was in selecting 84 candidates out of more than 1000 men and women who desired to go to the convention.

While no effort had been made to ascertain a second choice for president, Donahue revealed, the unit rule will apply to the delegation.

Only through the rule of the majority, he contended, can Massachusetts have an effective voice in the selection of a candidate for President.

WHAT A SEDAN DID TO A BIG FREIGHTER



This is what happened to coal truck when it locked horns with a passenger auto while crossing Morton st. at Norfolk st., Dorchester, today. The passenger was also overturned but the truck got the worst of the encounter, for two men on it were hurt.

Harvard Clinic to Chart Lindy Kidnap Dreams

How has the kidnaping of baby Lindbergh impressed itself on the subconscious minds of the American public?

Harvard psychologists interested in dream phenomena today announced their interest in all kinds of dreams by men, women and children pertinent to the kidnaping.

They asked for written and detailed accounts of the dreams and request that such communications be sent to "H. L. Stevens," Harvard Psychological Clinic, 34 Plympton st., Cambridge.

Harvard psychologists are sure the dreams will in no way solve the mystery but, as the basis of psychological studies, they feel the kidnaping will offer interesting detail that can be analyzed and catagoried.

Persons who dream of the missing child are asked to report their age and sex and, if they are parents, the age and sex of their children.

Should the material prove interesting, an account of the analysis of the dreams will be made public.

It was further stated that subconscious minds react so differently to highly publicized accounts of events and happenings that unusual data is expected in the collections the psychologists hope to gather from the dream letters.

Is the sub-conscious mind susceptible to emphasized newspaper stories?

Does it easily absorb printed accounts and do these printed accounts register impressions on the retinae of the sub-conscious mind?

This and other interesting psychological information is expected by the psychologists, who expect valuable letters for interesting studies.

SALEM STUDENT SHOOTS SELF

Salem, March 12—Ernest Blaney, 19, a graduate of the Essex County agricultural school, was dying today in Salem Hospital from a shotgun wound in the abdomen, inflicted, according to police, by himself.

Blaney staggered into his home in Boston st., Middleton, last night, after members of his family had heard a shot in the back yard.

The Topsfield barracks were notified and Trooper William Faron, who responded, gave the youth first aid treatment until arrival of Dr. Charles Deering of Danvers, who ordered Blaney sent to the hospital.

Elbridge Blaney, a brother of the wounded boy, submitted to a blood transfusion early today and gave his brother a pint of blood. Although he rallied, the latter is on the danger list with slight chance for his recovery, according to the hospital.

N. Y. Realtor Owes 14 Million; Has $380,602

New York, March 12 (AP)—Henry Mandel, New York real estate operator, builder and promoter of many enterprises, today filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy.

He listed liabilities at $14,060,028, and assets of $380,602.

Sale of Speakeasy Advertised in Hoboken Paper

Hoboken, N. J., March 12 (INS)—"For sale: Speakeasy, Hoboken, well-paying, $700. John Muller, Hoboken."

This advertisement appeared in a local paper—and Muller, a real estate agent, admitted he had the place for sale. He said:

"Of course, I offered the place for sale. It has a good location and is a bargain at $700. And if the buyer don't like the place, I have two or three other spots on my list.

FOLDS UP COAT, HANGS SELF

Laying his overcoat and hat carefully on the ground, a well-dressed man of about 30 climbed a tree and hanged himself today in the woods off Follen st., East Lexington.

The body was found by Harold Aldrich, 17, of Locust ave., East Lexington, who was walking through the woods with his hunting dog.

The man's underwear was labelled "W. L. Morris," but no other marks of identification were found.

SCHOOL MASTER GOULART DEAD

F. J. Goulart, master of Kelly Grammar School, Cambridge, died suddenly in his home, 6 Rindge ter., North Cambridge, early today. He had been suffering with heart trouble.

Mr Goulart was president of the Masters and Teachers' Association, a member of Cambridge Council, K. of C., and superintendent of the Sunday school at St. John's Church, North Cambridge.

He is survived by his widow Mrs. Eleanor Goulart, seven children, three brothers, a sister and his mother.

Born in Provincetown, he was educated there and at Harvard and Boston University. He taught in Boston and Weymouth before coming to Cambridge.

CLOSED BANK IN BALDWIN SUIT

Providence, March 12 (AP)—A bill to recover from the estate of Luther C. Baldwin, formerly of this city, some of the $4,000,000 loss suffered in failure of a bank of which he was president at Manchester, N. H., was filed in Federal court here today.

The complainants, the Merrimack River Savings Bank, and Willard D. Rand, bank commissioner of New Hampshire, seek a permanent injunction against the Rhode Island Hospital Trust Co. as administrator paying Julia A. Baldwin, the widow, any part of the estate. Baldwin, head of the United States Bobbin & Shuttle Co., died last June after serving as president of the bank more than five years.

In the bill filed today, it is alleged he failed to exercise due care in management of the bank.

Ship Calls for Aid 50 Miles Off Halifax

New York, March 12 (INS)—An S O S message requesting assistance at once was received at Halifax today from the S. S. Reindeer, a salvage ship at sea 50 miles south of Halifax, according to the Mackay Radio Co., this city. She is leaking badly.

The Canadian Pacific liner Montcalm has gone to her assistance. The Reindeer was in the way of the German steamer Harburg, whose steering gear is broken.

IN FLOWER GARDEN AT 1932 POSIE SHOW

The Flower Show of 1932 is mighty interesting. Hundreds of types of plants and flowers are on display. The place is Horticultural Hall. We show you here one of the many beautiful flower displays, in which Miss Edith Rowe of the Seabrook, N. H., nurseries is shown in the Dutch Tulip Garden, a reproduction of the famous garden in Holland. (Staff photo.)

SPITALE-BITZ LIQUOR CASE TO JURY

New York, March 12 (INS)—The fate of Salvatore Spitale and Irving Bitz, with ten others charged with conspiracy to violate the volstead act, was placed in the hands of a jury in a Federal court in Brooklyn this afternoon.

The defendants were members of a group of 16 arrested on July 26, 1931. Police testified they were called to the bench on a report that a rum running ship was landing liquor there.

Abraham Kesselman, chief defense counsel, pleaded to release the defendants on the ground they were victims of police persecution and that when arrested they had a perfect right to be where they were found.

Kesselman, in his plea, made no reference to the fact that Spitale and Bitz had been named by Col. Lindbergh to negotiate with the kidnapers of his baby.

Before the trial started Kesselman announced that as soon as the trial was ended Spitale and Bitz planned to go to Detroit on a "hot tip" in connection with the Lindbergh case.

Bartenders' Guide Stolen From Shelf in Public Library

Newark, N. J., March 12 (INS)—"The Bartenders' Guide" and other books showing how to mix cocktails and make other alcoholic drinks were missing today from the shelves of the public library.

"They were so popular they were stolen," Marguerite L. Gates, assistant librarian, declared. "Since prohibition, it has been impossible to keep books containing recipes for drinks."

POSTAL CREDIT UNIONS GAIN

Postal employes' credit unions have experienced a continued steady and substantial growth and development during the past year, a report submitted to clerks and carriers at the Boston postoffice and sub-stations revealed today.

On December 31, 1931, there were 275 such associations with a total membership of 49,037 and assets of $5,078,874. The increase in membership was approximately 21 per cent.

The first postal credit union was formed in an office with a personnel of about 150 and began business on January 17, 1923, with eight members owning 10 shares of stock and assets of $18.50.

The total number of loans made to members by all postal employes' credit unions to December 31, 1931, was 172,437. The total amount was $21,642,432.

FLAY 'GRAFT' IN FARM BOARD

Washington, March 12 (AP)—Senator Borah (R.), Idaho, told the Senate today that some of the salaries paid to officials of farm board subsidiaries amount to "legalized graft."

Borah's attack came during consideration of the nominations of three board members.

He said the total payroll of the board and its subsidiaries amounts to $2,757,000 a year.

He called attention to the salary of $75,000 paid to E. F. Creekmore, manager of the Cotton Stabilization Corporation, and said it represented from $150,000 to $200,000 on the basis of normal cotton prices.

The $50,000 salary of George S. Milnor, manager of the Wheat Stabilization Corporation, Borah said, under normal wheat prices would amount to $125,000 or $140,000.

"These salaries," he said, "could not be justified at any time or any place. They are unconscionable."

Borah charged a nation-wide propaganda campaign against his bill to require cuts in the salaries. He said this campaign had not been organized by farmers "but those engaged in exploiting farmers."

SURE! CAPONE 'STOLE' BABY!

The Lindbergh case was "solved" today right on our own Boston Common.

"Scarface" Al Capone kidnaped the baby. . . it was a plot to get him out of jail. . . he is going to return the baby. . . he is going to get $50,000 in ransom and a $10,000 reward. . . This could go on for columns.

Irving Keith of the Young Communist League did the solving in a fiery speech for the Unemployed Council of America.

The newspapers are printing too much about the Lindbergh baby, said several other speakers, including Harry Canter, Joseph Leeds, J. H. Feingold and others.

About 200 attended including Judge Brooks of Malden district court, who paused for a moment on a walk through the Common.

Oh, yes. The meeting was announced as a protest against the riots at the Ford plant in Dearborn, Mich., a few days ago.

Bullet Kills Her

Mary Runyon, Wellesley College graduate, is dead in Maplewood, N. J. She put a bullet in her heart. She left a farewell note.

BIG SEAS DELAY RESCUE SHIP

Still battling heavy seas and a half gale from the northwest, the British freighter Laganbank reported today she may not arrive here with the rescued crew of the collier DeBardeleben until tomorrow night or Monday morning.

The rescued men, taken from the collier a few hours before she sank Thursday, were reported none the worse for their experience by Capt. T. E. Alexander, skipper of the rescue ship.

The Laganbank crew and rescued men will be landed at the quarantine station and after, according to present plans, the vessel is fumigated she will dock at the Mystic docks to unload.

RAIDERS SEIZE 4 IN BURLINGTON

Lowell, March 12 (AP)—Four men, arrested by federal agents during a raid at Burlington in which contraband valued at $15,000 was seized, were held by U. S. Commissioner Walsh today on charges of violating the national prohibition act.

They gave their names as Minot S. Percy of Burlington; Michele Turinco, North st., Boston; Joseph Amari, Charter st., Boston, and Giolamo Giamo, Newton st., Everett.

Percy was held in $500 bonds, which he provided, until April 1. The other three were unable to provide bonds of $1000 each and were sent to the Lawrence jail until next Tuesday.

The agents who conducted the raid at Breezy Hill Farm, Burlington, seized a 1000-gallon still, a 750-gallon still, 10,000 gallons of mash, 1000 pounds of sugar, 100 pounds of yeast, 12 1000-gallon wooden vats, pumps, boilers, condensers and other equipment.

Bogus $10 Bills in N. H.

Concord, N. H., March 12—Warning that three men in a Massachusetts car were passing counterfeit $10 bills here was broadcast today by Willoughby A. Colby, county solicitor.

BREWSTER IS IN RACE FOR CONGRESS

Bangor, Me., March 12—A definite announcement that he would seek the Republican nomination for Congress from the third Maine district in the June primary election was made today by former Gov. Ralph O. Brewster.

Ralph O. Brewster

Brewster's announcement follows:

"Two years ago the voters of the new Third Maine Congressional District gave a six thousand majority in favor of my representing them at Washington. Many of those interested have indicated their desire for my entry into the present primary for the Republican nomination for Congress.

WILL ENTER CONTEST

"This I have decided to do.

"The realistic discussion of national questions by candidates seems essential if a democracy is to function. Today, agricultural and industrial problems are pressing on every hand.

"The voters of this section are naturaly and properly interested to know what a candidate thinks and what he proposes to do about the potato and pulp situation and about the fishing and canning industry. The government is making billions of dollars of our money available for relief of one character and another.

"So far very little of this has come to Maine. A dole in any form is repugnant to our New England concept of government, but it is increasingly evident that Maine must either get its share of government aid and protection in various forms or stop contributing to other sections that are no worse off than we.

MAINE NEEDS AID

"Maine cannot continue to drift. Potatoes and pulp and canneries face a crisis.

"As occasion offers, I shall state my views upon these questions.

"My interest in Maine development is as keen as ever."

Brewster was elected to the Maine House of Representatives in 1916 and was renominated, but resigned to enter the military service.

In 1920 he was again elected to the House, in 1922 to the Senate and in 1924 to the governorship, to which he was re-elected in 1926.

While governor he served two terms as chairman of the Conference of Governors of the United States and brought the conference to Maine, taking the governors literally from Kittery to Fort Kent.

During his administration the chief emphasis was on Maine development and publicity, and the Maine Development Commission was created and its activities commenced.

BLAZE ROUTS 30 TECH STUDENTS

Fire in the boiler room of the M. I. T. Delta Upsilon fraternity house at 525 Beacon st., Back Bay, drove 30 Tech students to the street early today.

Smoke awakened George E. Wenstenfeld, a student, who aroused the others.

An adjoining fraternity house, Theta Chi, housed the refugees while firemen battled the blaze, which caused a $2000 loss.

58 NATIONS PAY TRIBUTE TO BRIAND

Paris, March 12 (INS)—The mortal remains of Aristide Briand was laid to rest today.

The Republic of France and representatives of 57 nations accorded the departed statesman a national funeral and Paris contributed its own part by ceasing, for five full minutes, all activity.

The scurrying taxis and lumbering buses came to an abrupt halt at 2 p. m., when Premier Andre Tardieu began his funeral oration from a rostrum in front of the Quai D'Orsay.

From then until five minutes past two the city's roar was stilled. Pedestrians in the streets stood still, their heads uncovered, until the five minutes had elapsed.

Standing before Briand's coffin, banked with floral tribute the most conspicuous of which was an imposing wreath from the German Government, Tardieu paid tribute to the great career of the "Apostle of Peace" but drove home in his hearers that Briand, while fighting for peace and international understanding, always fought for France.

"Briand never consented to, counselled nor desired sacrifice of military guarantees," Tardieu said. "His maxim was security."

Representatives of the church and the state joined in the offer of homage. Cardinal Verdier of Paris gave the benediction of the Catholic Church in the Clock Room of the foreign office at the Quai D'Orsay.

MAJOR WHITE A BEARER

Personal representatives of kings and presidents bowed before the coffin. Behind the hearse marched thousands of ex-service men bearing flags.

One of the honorary pallbearers was Major E. L. White, of New Haven, Ct., president of the Fidac (the inter-allied veterans association).

The only part played by the military in the funeral was the parade before the coffin at the foreign office. The troops were led by Gen. H. J. E. Gouraud, who was on foot.

Tanks, heavy guns and other paraphernalia of war usually prominent in national funerals were absent. Only men, for whose lives M. Briand worked, were in the procession.

30 MILLIONS TO VOTE SUNDAY

Berlin, March 12 (AP)—Republican Germany stood at the crossroads today, as nearly 30,000,000 voters, the last din of a bitter election campaign sounding in their ears, wondered which road to take.

Down one road lay the way to communism akin to that of Soviet Russia. On another, to the right, the sign pointed to Adolf Hitler's camp of Fascism. A third way, the road of the Nationalists, swerved backward toward the old monarchy.

On the fourth road stood the octogenarian former warrior, President Paul Von Hindenburg, seeking re-election with a promise to maintain the moderation of the Republic.

In responsible quarters the belief prevailed that election day would see a decisive rally around the grim old president.

The campaign rallies of his three opponents, Adolf Hitler, National Socialist; Theodore Duesterberg, Nationalist, and Ernst Thaelmann, Communist, have been attended by huge, enthusiastic crowds.

PROF. ROGERS IN SO. BOSTON

South Boston's joint celebration of St. Patrick's Day and the 156th anniversary of the evacuation of Boston by British troops will open tomorrow night with historical exercises at the Broadway Theater.

Prof. Robert E. Rogers of M. I. T., columnist for the Boston Evening American, will be the orator. Prizes in the essay contest for South Boston school children will be awarded by Dr. Charles E. Mackey of the school committee.

Gov. Ely, Mayor Curley, Cong. John W. McCormack and high naval and military officials will be guests of the South Boston Citizens' Assn. on Wednesday night at the annual "night before" banquet.

School children will have a holiday on Thursday and will be guests of managers at all theaters in the district in the morning.

The concluding feature of the celebration, the parade, has been arranged by Chief Marshal Leo T. Connors and his chief of staff, James P. McGarry.

A celebration exclusively in honor of St. Patrick's Day is planned by the Charitable Irish Society. Rev. Richard Blackburn Washington, lineal descendant of George Washington; Sen. Robert J. Bulkley of Ohio, Gov. Ely and Mayor Curley will be guests and speakers at the 195th annual banquet of the society at the Hotel Somerset.

Fire Destroys Farm House in Newbury

Newburyport, March 12—Joseph Rostokowski ran a mile and a half this morning, to the nearest telephone to sound an alarm that his 12-room farmhouse, known as Rock Farm was ablaze.

When firemen arrived they had to dam a brook and lay 2800 feet of hose to get a stream on the flames and by that time there wasn't much left of the house, which was valued at $6000.

Radio's Famous Father Coughlin » His Works and Messages

"My God! If you have any manliness, if you have the least spark of your own childhood, or for your own mother left in your heart, bring the baby to some orphanage, to some priest house. Oh! If I could only do it, I would be glad to go there and take the child from your arms.

RADIO PRIEST TELLS HIS STORY

Out to 20,000,000 radio listeners goes a sermon by Fr. Coughlin each Sunday afternoon from the Shrine of the Little Flower at Royal Oak, Mich. Who will forget the appeal made to the Lindbergh baby kidnapers, part of which is given in the inset?

Fr. Coughlin Champion of Working Class

By ALAN FRAZER

(Copyright, 1932, by the Boston Evening American)

Obstacles "lick" some men.

They brought out Father Coughlin's greatness. Made him famous. Showed him a way to serve mankind.

Here was a mighty obstacle. His little wooden church completed, he had tallied his accounts and found the parish owed $89,000.

To meet this debt he had the help of 26 families of the parish. The help of this little flock and his own strength, energy and will. The help of God.

With the consent of Bishop Gallagher, he took his God-given powers to the air. Cast his bread upon the waters. Gave his listeners courage. And his audience increased. He gave them hope. Gave them advice. Guidance. Consolation. And millions listened in.

Funds with which to serve God and his fellow men were his reward.

A long road he has traveled since the day when he went to Royal Oak to establish the Shrine of the Little Flower.

SERMONS MAKE HISTORY

Sermons of help and service are its milestones.

There was the Lindbergh sermon, over which men and women wept.

There was his vigorous protest against the growth of Communism.

Late in 1930 there was a sermon tingling with Americanism which set a nation talking. With his consent and that of the publishers of his book, "Father Coughlin's Radio Sermons," his words are here set down, in part:

"It is the privilege of the Golden Hour of the Little Flower to discuss labor and its relevant problems, not with any erratic idea of degrading this pulpit into a political rostrum, but rather with the conviction that this is, perhaps, the chief moral question of our generation.

"To quote the words of the head of the Catholic Church: 'At this moment, the condition of the working population is the question of the hour. Nothing can be of higher interest to all classes of the state than that it should be rightly and reasonably decided.'

"Moreover, as far back as the year 1891, Leo XIII practically commanded that we, the priests of this church, become interested in this vital subject which deals with the relations between man and man, employer and employe.

"Therefore, it is understandable why a Catholic priest who is interested in the moral welfare of his fellow citizens is consequently solicitous for the physical prosperity and peace of his country.

"In this present crisis we dare not be silent; for the equivalent of a command has gone forth that every minister of holy religion 'must throw into the conflict all the energy of his mind and all the strength of his endurance.'

BANKERS' NOVEL WAY

"Reference has been made to the stupendous amount of American money which has been exported to Europe and elsewhere for the purpose of building up foreign industries.

"In the course of events, this expatriated money will compete in neutral markets with our own industries. The result will be that our unemployment situation, instead of being helped and cured, will be rendered more acute and critical in future years.

"If there is such a thing as patriotism and love of our fellow citizens—citizens whose labor helped amass these billions—then our international industrialists and bankers have been manifesting these virtues in a peculiar and novel manner.

"Did it ever occur to you that there is no immediate need on the part of some of our capitalists to develop foreign industry? Nor is there any altruism or magnanimous charity attached to the action if there be truth in the old saying that 'charity begins at home.'

"Did it ever occur to you that there is a vast, undeveloped empire bounded by the Golden Gate and the Statue of Liberty, by the warm waters of the Gulf and the frozen shores of the Great Lakes?

"Quoting from a survey made by the American Federation of Labor, we have here in the United States of America 5,000,000 families who are living below the minimum of the health requirements of food.

There are 4,500,000 families with barely enough to sustain life at its level. Here are 9,500,000 families of more than 33,000,000 persons who are eager to buy the products of our automobile industry, of our textile industry, or any other industries if their incomes permitted it.

AN EMPIRE HERE!

"Add to these 7,000,000 families of Americans who own no automobile, the 20,000,000 families who as yet possess no efficient radio set; the 4,000,000 families in whose homes there are no bath tubs; the 15,000,000 families whose homes are not even wired for electricity.

"What a stupendous, undeveloped empire within our very midst!

"Why need we spend lavishly of our American dollars abroad to develop foreign nations? To build up foreign industries? To alleviate the impoverished conditions of foreign peoples when within our very gates there is a huge, virgin market ready for our products?

"Multiply these figures by four to obtain the number of persons actually affected. Conservatively you have a population greater than that of the British Isles; greater than the population of France; outnumbering the people of the Kingdom of Italy; equal to the one-time German Empire.

"The distant fields of internationalism appear all the greener to the greedy eyes of those who are blind to the land of their birth and to the uplifted hands of their fellow citizens who have helped them amass their stupendous fortune. But the immense profit made by cheap foreign labor is the siren song which coaxes the flow of gold from our American institutions.

"View the situation from another angle. We have in the great Mississippi Valley an empire of sufficient acreage to accommodate a population of 120,000,000 people over and above those who already claim that district as their homes.

"More than 120,000,000 potential citizens and consumers of our produce equivalent to the present total population of the United States!

"If mass production cannot subsist without mass consumption; if at least ten foreign markets are more or less lost to us by fact that their own people are beginning to produce their own industries, why need we Americans lose hope and courage when there is at our hands' reach a potential empire almost as great as the ten of them put together?

"With a controlled mass production, there is still a sane outlet for American money. Keep American money for American people. It was made by the sweat of American brows. If it must be exported to help wage an industrial war against our own laborers, place an export tax upon it.

"In referring to this great Mississippi Empire, my mind reverently goes back to the memory of one of the most outstanding men which our country has produced—a man who taught us the possibility of national development.

SEES FUTURE EMPIRE

"I refer to Theodore Roosevelt. If the sand dunes and cactus deserts of Arizona have been transformed into America's Garden of Eden, the credit is due to this mighty patriot, who was conscientious enough to expend his whole thought and his whole soul upon the development of his fatherland, rather than waste it upon the poetic ideals of figmentary internationalism.

"The spirit of this noble American shall not perish. Some day soon our unpopulated states shall bloom forth in prosperity and loveliness under the guilding hand of another genius who has the courage to be of the people and for them.

"Therefore, fellow countrymen, in this hour of sadness, we dare lift up our eyes to the better things to come. The glorious sunrise of yesterday shall return, once night has gone. Pay no heed, therefore, to those men who intimate that our system of economy is basically wrong. Spurn them when they advocate the doctrines that smack of Communism, of Russian Sovietism.

"Another Roosevelt shall have the courage to uncloak the hypocritical human factors who have debased our system—men who have manipulated it to benefit the apostles of privilege at the expense of the public good. Another Roosevelt shall labor for the development of our own country!

"I have been taught that effects cannot permanently be removed unless the causes which produce these effects are destroyed.

LABOR'S RIGHT

"The causes to which I refer are deep-seated in the irreligious hearts of selfish men; in the rapacity and greed which is too often identified with the compound profits of mass production; in the heartlessness which practically removes the usefulness of a laborer once he has attained the age of 45.

"From time immemorial the Catholic Church has taught the principle that the workingman or laborer does possess a right for collective bargaining, just as inalienably as do the amalgamated bankers or consolidated industrialists or trust corporations.

"This is a moment when each citizen must lend his every effort. Let the labor leaders put aside all their passion and bitterness. Let the employers realize that upon them do we rely for the soundness of their judgment.

"I know, my fellow Americans, that in this emergency we shall not be found wanting. Safely and constitutionally we shall meet these problems and, please God, we shall conquer them!"

(In tomorrow's Boston Sunday Advertiser, Patrick Dennis will have an intimate, personal story of Fr. Coughlin. Don't miss it!)

This interesting series will continue in Monday's American and will include Fr. Coughlin's Sunday radio address.

CRIES OF BABY WARN OF FIRE

Cries of a two-year old girl aroused two families in time for them to flee for safety when fire swept the two-family house at 15 Shirley st., Newton, early today.

The tiny heroine was Nancy Maher, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Maher, occupants of the first floor.

In the arms of her mother she was taken to the home of a neighbor while her father aroused Mr. and Mrs. Thomas E. Foley and Patrick J. Carroll.

WOMAN, 80, DIES IN VAIN FOR 3

Scranton, Pa., March 12 (AP)—A little old lady, half blind at 80, gave up her life last night in an effort to rescue her four brothers, each older than 70 years, from a fire which destroyed their home near Springville.

Three of the brothers also perished, but a fourth, Nelson Fyke, 72, badly burned about the body, escaped unclothed.

The dead:

Miss Mary Fyke, 80; Warren Fyke, 77; Newman Fyke, 74, and Jacob Fyke, 72.

The aged woman, awakened to find the house in flames. Despite her poor eyesight she struggled upstairs to where her brothers were and managed to arouse them all.

The three old men tried to find their clothes and perished with with their sister.

MISSING PATROL BOAT RESCUED

New York, March 12 (AP)—The British steamer Dakotian took the crippled coast guard patrol boat 218 in tow about 400 miles off New York today and started with her toward Nantucket, the Radio Marine Corp. said.

A radio message picked up by the corporation said the seven men aboard the government boat were "all O. K." The 218, missing since Monday, when she started to the aid of other storm battered shipping, sent out an appeal for aid a few hours earlier. She did not disclose the nature of her distress. It was the first word from her in more than five days.

The 218's radio was too weak to communicate with land, but the message was relayed here by the Dakotian. The weakness of the radio was thought to be the explanation of the government craft's long silence.

Canada to Found James Bay Seaport

North Bay, Ont., March 12 (AP)—Plans for a settlement of 5000 people on the rocky shore of James Bay in Northern Ontario at Moosonee, newest seaport of the North—were disclosed today. They have been approved unanimously by commissioners of the Temiskaming & Northern Ontario railway, of which Moosonee is northern terminus.

The new town will stretch two and one-half miles along the shore of the Moose river, which flows into James Bay.

Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont Pays Perry's Taxes

Newport, R. I., March 12 (AP)—Title to the villa of Mr. and Mrs. Perry Belmont, which had been advertised for sale for default of tax payments, was transferred today to Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, prominent in New York social circles.

The Perry Belmonts held a life interest in the property which would ultimately have gone to Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont. The latter purchased this life interest and assumed payment of the taxes, amounting to $10,222.

DUDISH BANDIT LOCKS GIRL IN, LOOTS TILL

A dude bandit robbed the Dorothy Muriel Food Shop, 115 Chiswick rd., Brighton, of $20 today, after locking a girl clerk and a boy customer in a back closet.

After the robbery, he calmly met two customers as they entered, chatted with them and walked out.

Exceptionally well dressed and wearing spats the robber produced a blue-steel revolver as he entered the shop, confronting Miss Ethel Landeman, the clerk, and 15-year-old Wilbur Tyler of 136 Strathmore rd.

Marching them into the back room, he shoved them into the closet, locked the door and warned them:

"If you make a peep I'll give it to you!"

After he had rifled the till, Mrs. C. A. Levine, 29 Haverly rd., and Alfred Webber, 114 Strathmore rd., came in.

"Good morning," said the bandit affably. "Wonder where the clerk is. What's the matter, anyway?"

"Why, I don't know," said Mrs. Levine.

"Well, you must be dumb," he said, and strolled out, leaving both customers to wonder what it was all about.

The screams of the boy and girl gave them an answer a few minutes later. Miss Landeman described the robber as about 30, five feet, six inches, of ruddy complexion, and wearing a grey soft hat, tight-fitting dark overcoat, black polka-dot scarf, and spats.

SOCIETY CROSSES THE CHARLES FOR ANNUAL HASTY PUDDING CLUB COSTUME PARTY

POPULAR IN YOUNG SET
MISS MARTHA MEANS, one of the most popular girls in society's young set, wore a dainty shawl at the Hasty Pudding Club's annual costume party last night in the clubhouse in Cambridge.

VIRGINIA RICE
COLONIAL BUD
MISS VIRGINIA RICE was charming in her gown of bygone days. The party was one of the smartest events of the late winter social season and the Harvard boys were delightful hosts.

BARBARA HODGES BURLEIGH PATTEE
A LITTLE CHAT BETWEEN DANCES
MISS BARBARA HODGES and Mr. Burleigh Pattee were snapped by the cameraman as they were enjoying a little chat between dances. It was a gala event for the Hasty Pudding Clubbers and society folks as well.

MARIAN CLARK
A LITTLE MAIDEN ATTENDED
MISS MARIAN CLARK appeared in a simple but charming costume and was one of the most popular of the society girls present. Debs and post-debs from all parts of Greater Boston were present.

VIRGINIA WALKER JOSEPH CLARK
ALL SET FOR A LITTLE SAIL
MISS VIRGINIA WALKER and Mr. Joseph Clark look snappy in their sailor costumes. Among the society matrons who were in the receiving line were Mrs. N. Penrose Hallowell, Mrs. David Cheever, Mrs. Gaspar G. Bacon, Mrs. Ralph B. Williams and Mrs. Philip Stockton. (All photos by Boston Evening American Staff Photographer.)

SNAPSHOTS AND BACKDROPS OF THE VINCENT VENTURES:

Nancy Whitman, as the handsome hero, lending a real romantic flavor to the role of Kenneth Atwater, in white flannels and Eton cropped hair. Her tap-dancing number was one of the best performances in the show.

SALLY WHITE

Linda Collens, the million-dollar baby from the five and ten cent store, in a convincing bit of vernacular, was very comic.

• • •

Mrs. W. Philips Decker, in an uproarious Marie Dressler part, she and Mrs. John E. Thayer, Jr., as the principals in a matrimonial bureau affair, gave a Broadway touch to the show; we wonder if Mrs. Thayer was smoking Kimono Kimono's.

• • •

Jane Bancroft as "Joe," whom we did not recognize, had us completely bewildered and befuddled as to his identity.

• • •

Sally White amazed us by her poise and stage assurance, as we believe this was her first appearance on the boards.

• • •

The very zippy, pony ballet, which included two of the prettiest debutantes of this year, Mary Jane Bigelow and Jane Wheeler.

• • •

Ushers, fluttering up and down in lavender gowns, and crisp white aprons, former headliners of previous club shows, gave an air of friendly welcome to all.

Planning Show

BEFORE VERY LONG WE shall have the contemporary to the Vincent Club, entertaining us with their 86th annual show. The Hasty Pudding Club is arranging a production that will feature a dancing chorus of glorified maidens, with snappy songs introduced into a plot entitled "Pudding on the Ritz," a spectacular musical revue which is sure to be highly appreciated, as these most excellent spring shows by this club have always been. The chorus girls will be Henry Bourneuf, James Paul, Pelham Stevens, James Weeks, Henty McIlhenny, Nelson Aldrich, Richard Waters, Rollin Gallagher, John Williams, Richard Baxter, Thomas Clark, Anson Nichols and Francis Richardson. Leading parts, the gallant hero, Holyoke, will be taken by Mr. Edward B. Cole, Harvard '32, while that of his petite heroine, Priscilla, is to be portrayed by Mr. Le Grand L. Thurber.

Tech Grad to Wed

AN ENGAGEMENT OF INTEREST to Boston has just been announced in Buffalo, New York. Mr. R. L. Moses, M. I. T., 1929, will take as his wife, Katherine Van Loan of that city, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Van Loan. Mr. Moses is an electrical engineer with the New York Telephone Co. He is the son of Col. L. H. Moses, U. S. M. C., retired, and Mrs. Moses of Arlington. The wedding is planned to take place in September.

Also in Cast

OTHER WELL KNOWN members in the cast include Guy Hayes, Alfred Pratt and Taggart Whipple, as Mr. Lafferty, Mr. Malone and Mr. O'Dowd, respectively; Roger Hewlett takes the part of Bacchus, Geoffrey Lewis the part of Codger and Stevens Flynn is going to enact the amusing role of "Chief Radio Girl."

• • •

THE AUTHOR OF THIS, THE latest of the Hasty Pudding Club's talented productions, is Mr. J. R. Jackson, Harvard '32, and judging from the news that's going around he is likely to receive a great ovation from those fortunate to enjoy the show. We hope to tell you lots more about this work at a later date.

WE LEARN THAT MRS. S. HUNTINGTON WOLCOTT, of Readville, Mass., is staying at the Weylin Hotel in New York.

Mrs. Grant to Be Hostess

Mrs. Wilbur S. Grant, of Peterboro, N. H., who furnished the children's waiting room at the Judge Baker Foundation's new home at 38½ Beacon st., will be the hostess for the second in the series of house warmings which the foundation will hold on Tuesday, March 15, for the members of social agencies and their staffs.

Among those assisting Mrs. Grant will be Mrs. Alvan T. Fuller, Mrs. Franklin Hobbs, Mrs. Norman Greely, Mrs. Horace Morison, Mrs. Jonathan Brown, 3rd, Mrs. Philip K. Brown, Mrs. Brown Fairfax, Miss Nancy Morison and Miss Elizabeth Morison.

Society Notes

THE JUNIOR LEAGUE PLAYERS will start rehearsing Monday at 10:30 at the League rooms for "Ding Dong Bell," a play for children to be given at the Elizabeth Peabody House. Settlement children will be invited to several performances, and on Saturday morning, April 16, there will be public performances for which tickets will be on sale later.

THERE WILL BE A MEETING of the Scribblers' Club of the Junior League Monday at 3:30 o'clock. Tea will be served afterwards. The Glee Club is to meet Tuesday at 2:30, in preparation for their annual concert, which is to be on Wednesday, March 23.

Horse Show to Aid Newsboys

Additional names of patrons for the Horse Racing Tournament for the benefit of the Burroughs Newsboys Foundation, to be held at the Boston Arena from March 26 to April 2, are:

Mrs. George Upton, Mr. Elbridge C. Gale, Mrs. Hobart W. Winkley, Mrs. S. B. Doggett, Mrs. B. H. Bristow Draper, Mrs. George R. Agassiz, Mrs. John Richardson, Jr., Mrs. Frederick H. Curtiss, Mrs. Philip H. Thayer, Mrs. Bacon Pleasonton, Mrs. Robert Williams, Mrs. W. H. Lyon, Mrs. Leston W. Fifield, Mrs. David Johnson, Mrs. Sewell Fessenden, Maj. and Mrs. Philip Sherwood, Mrs. Henry Tudor, Mrs. Rudolph Grew, Mrs. Jesse Koshland, Miss Carrie Fitch, Mrs. Robert Gould Shaw, 2d, Mr. James Burgess, Mrs. George Putnam, Mrs. John C. Lee, Mrs. Percy Musgrave, Mrs. Alexanader Whiteside, Mrs. Charles D. Maginnis, Mrs. James B. Draper, Mrs. Horace M. Houser and Mrs. Frank Stewart.

The tournament promises many thrilling features for the seven evening performances and three matinees. A horse frolic, each program presenting three hours of equine action, including many events never before seen in this part of the country. Running races for the world's record indoors, including half-mile races for professional jockeys, for gentlemen riders, steeplechases, bareback races for stable boys, also jumping competitions, polo games, chariot races, Roman standing races and cowboy races with men and girl riders. There will be a mounted military band and exhibitions by the 110th Cavalry cossacks, Boston police and others.

The purpose of the foundation is to give the newsboy an opportunity to develop his latent qualities and experiences of the street, to the end that he may make of himself a successful man and a useful citizen. Hundreds of newsboys are today the sole support of their families. They come to the foundation hungry, ragged and shoes completely worn out.

BOOKS—and a Number of Things

By CHARLES HANSON TOWNE

"I had not wished to write this book," says Edward Gordon Craig, who now brings out his long-awaited reply to Bernard Shaw, who was wicked enough to publish his correspondence with Craig's mother.

He calls his volume "Ellen Terry and Her Secret Self" (Dutton), and it seems to me rather a hysterical document, given to the public for the purpose of excoriating the brilliant Mr. Shaw, and striving to show another Ellen Terry to us that the world did not know and never could know.

Craig and Shaw had some correspondence, back in 1929, anent the possible publication of the now famous Letters; but it is a pity that he does not give us this correspondence in its entirety. It might have cleared up some points.

Shaw has read this book—it has appeared in England; and what he has said of it may be interesting:

"Tragically moving—for if you disregard the rubbish about me, which is neither here nor there, it is a poignant human document."

This may inevitably bring forth a reply from Mr. Craig, asking why it is "rubbish" to say what he does of Shaw. In that case, there would be more of the italics which Mr. Craig revels in, even as did his emotional mother, and we should be in again for a war of words that gets both sides nowhere.

There are some delightful vignettes of the Ellen Terry of the home and the theater, which serve to reveal her in gracious fashion; but, for the most part, I found this an unworthy record, full of inconsequential facts.

Clinton Scollard and his wife, Jessie B. Rittenhouse — the latter famed for her several anthologies —have collected the best vers de societe written by American poets from Philip Freneau down to the present day. The result is a volume called "Patrician Rhymes," published by Houghton-Mifflin.

It is a delight to wander through these fragrant pages and to see how well some of our versifiers have done their work. Light verse may not be written lightly. It is a serious job; and pieces like these are not "dashed off."

Allow me to quote, as an example, Theodosia Garrison's "The Cynic," which appeared years ago, unless memory betrays me, in the old Ainslee's, when that periodical, like The Smart Set, was printing some of the best verse it was possible for editors to obtain:

I say it to comfort me over and over,
Having a querulous heart to beguile,
Never had woman a tenderer lover—
For a little while.

Oh, there never were eyes more eager to read her
In her saddest mood or her moments gay,
Oh, there never were hands more strong to lead her—
For a little way.

There never were loftier promises given
Of love that should guard her the ages through,
As great, enduring and steadfast as Heaven—
For a week or two.

Well, end as it does, I have had it, known it,
For this shall I turn me to weep or pray?
Nay, rather I laugh that I thought to own it
For more than a day.

You will find many of your old favorites here, from Longfellow to Witter Bynner and Carolyn Wells and Oliver Herford and Arthur Guiterman; from John Godfrey Saxe to Lizette Woodworth Reese and Louis Untermeyer and Dorothy Parker. This beautifully made and beautifully edited volume will make a charming gift for some friend who is fond of poetry.

86 FISHER COACH AWARDS

Isadore Leavitt of Revere and Kathleen Shaughnessy of Roxbury Head List

Skill in craftsmanship and perseverance in completing the cut outs won cash prizes for 86 Greater Boston school boys and girls in the Fisher Body Napoleonic Coach Contest, sponsored by the Boston Evening American. First prize of $100 for the best model made by a boy was won by Isadore Leavitt, 14-year-old student of Shurtleff school of Chelsea, and son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Leavitt of 77 Congress st., Revere. In winning this award Leavitt also brings a prize of $50 to Joseph Handry, sub-master of the school.

First prize for the best model made by a girl was won by Kathleen Shaughnessy, 15-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Shaughnessy of 3 Quincy ter., Roxbury. Miss Shaughnessy, who is a student of Girls' Roxbury Memorial High Annex, also wins a $50 award for her teacher, Miss Hohman.

OTHER WINNERS

Second prize, for the best model made by boy or girl, was won by Ruth Jenness, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank A. Jenness. Miss Jenness, who is 16, and a student of North Quincy high school, was awarded $50 in cash.

Third prize, a cash award of $25 for the best coach made by either boy or girl, was won by Alice Nielson, who is 14 years old, and resides at 29 Washington ave., Needham. Miss Nielson is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Nielson, and enjoys the further distinction of being the granddaughter of the famed Swedish operatic star, Alice Nielson, to whom she bears a striking resemblance.

Fourth prize of $15, which was also to be awarded to a boy or girl, was won by Jacob Silverman, son of Mr. and Mrs. David Silverman of 3 Ballou ave., Dorchester. Pictures of the second, third and fourth prize winners will appear in Monday's Boston Evening American.

DIFFICULT TASK

Before announcing winners of the other prizes it is important to note that because of use of glue without sufficient lasting adhesive qualities, many of the entries arrived with parts loose, or came apart while standing on the exhibition tables. Other entries altered the model, and some neglected to cut out all of the parts which were supposed to have been eliminated. There were several hundred entries and the task of judging was difficult.

The judges were George S. Stroud, advertising director, B. Kuppenheimer Co., Chicago, Ill., E. Eugene Umland, assistant to the president, Kennedy Co., Boston, and Edward H. Hunvald, advertising manager, Houghton & Dutton Co., Boston.

In addition to the chief awards, they assigned the following prizes of $10 each:

Robert J. Whittier, 200 Presidents lane, Quincy; Madeline L. Morganstern, 105 Salisbury rd., Brookline; Ruth Blum, 20 Mattapan st., Mattapan; Vincent Aldorisio, 59 Bosson st., Revere; John J. Fecitt, 47 Chamberlain ave., Revere; Earl Johnson, 235 Lakeview ave., Cambridge; George Tobin, 51 Gates st., South Boston; Arthur Mortuori, 50 Prince st., Boston; Ann Pollak, 38 Leston st., Mattapan; Paul Bostwick, 59 Sharon rd., Atlantic; Benjamin Cooperstein, 109 Vernon st., Roxbury.

IN WINNERS' LIST

These contestants won $5 each:

Harry E. King, 132 Daniels st., Malden; Norman L. Wiswell, 86 Lonsdale st., Dorchester; Fred Wadon, 34 Bingham ave., Dedham; Frank Salamone, 51 Chelsea st., Everett; May Salamone, 51 Chelsea st., Everett; Sidney Rosen, 50 Walnut pk., Roxbury; Alexander M. Madden, 158 Fayerweather st., Cambridge; Jeanette Murphy, 37 Crawford st., E. Watertown; Charles Mason, 135 Belmont st., Everett; Thomas Markham, 23 Etna st., Brighton; Ewald Kraulin, 18 Miller st., Methuen; Archie Mugrdichian, 105 Vernon st., Roxbury; Martin Slater, 23 Ardell st., Quincy; Arthur S. Davis, 105 Inland st., Lowell; Stanley Standrik, 2 Quincy ter., Roxbury; Samuel J. Savasta, 1150 Bennington st., East Boston; Robert L. Sinclair, 560 E. 8th st., South Boston; Thomas Ferris, 122 Falcon st., E. Boston; John Boyd, 3958 Washington st., Roslindale; Everett Fletcher, 10 Kinsbury st., Roxbury.

Fifty awards of $2 each were made:

Antonio Amenta, 136 Trenton st., East Boston; Robert P. Gutterman, 105 Winchester st., Brookline; Elizabeth Serrilla, 59 Baker ave., Lexington; Ernest Royal, 105 Kendall st., Boston; Robert E. Dillon, 4 Francis ave., Greenwood; Anna Magnason, 9 Juniper st., Roxbury; Joseph A. Timpany, 12 Leydon st., Medford; Gino Pellegrini, 22 Pleasant st., Beverly; David Devine, 40 Victory rd., Dorchester; Guy Giudone, 89 Bowdoin st., Medford; Mario Guarino, 44 Westville st., Dorchester; Martin Barron, 551 East Sixth st., South Boston; Charles Cannanta, 149 Saratoga st., East Boston; Roy Lesage, 484 Lincoln st., Marlboro; Alfred Blando, 471 Cross st., Malden; Paul A. News of Boston Churches

Including Massachusetts and Greater Boston Churches

DR. ATKINSON FINDS NATIONS DIVIDED

According to Dr. H. A. Atkinson in Geneva, Italy and Spain favor Russia's proposal for complete disarmament, as against France's plan for a world police force. With France stand Belgium, Poland, Czechoslovakia and Japan. Other nations take a middle ground, that of gradual reduction until final disarmament is accomplished. Dr. Atkinson is general secretary for the World Conference for International Peace Through Religion and sees a most disturbing element in the present Japanese warfare on China. "Can the League of Nations Prevent War?" The Dr. says "Japan has forced the issue."

In the Light of the Literary Digest

Among other prelude questions that are confronting the Rev. A. Z. Conrad at the Park Street Church tomorrow evening, is one sent to him asking "What encouraging word can you give in the light of the Literary Digest?" The Doctor says if anyone is curious let them come and hear what I have to say. Other questions to be answered: "Is American making three million criminals every year?" "What will the harvest be?" "How can people go on with force and fire at ninety?" "Can there be an open mind and closed Bible?" "To the average boy who is the greater hero. Al Capone, or President Hoover?"

Dr. Conrad will preach in the morning on "Making Life Majestic, Masterful and Mighty." In the evening "Anchored to Invisible Reality and Eternal Verities."

Five of Boston's Finest Will Preach

Preachers of outstanding ability and personality will be found in the Tremont Temple pulpit this week at the noonday meetings of the Greater Boston Federation of Churches. They will be heard in the following order: Monday, Dean Vaughan Dabney of the Newton-Andover Theological School; Tuesday, the Rev. Lynn J. Radcliffe; Wednesday, Bishop Henry K. Sherrill; Thursday, the Rev. Russell Henry Stafford, and on Friday, Dean Willard L. Sperry of the Harvard Divinity School.

The singers will be in order: The Mansfield Singers, a Negro quartet; John Percival, Mrs. Ethel Metras, Adell Phillips Holden and George S. Dane. These services are broadcast over WEEI beginning at 12:30.

Music Hour at First Church

Part II of Mendelssohn's "Elijah" will be sung at the First Church in Boston, corner of Berkeley and Marlboro sts., Sunday at 4:30 p. m. The performance will be under the direction of William E. Zeuch, who will preside at the organ. The following soloists will assist a chorus choir of 65 professional voices: Mrs. Elizabeth Worcester Beaman, soprano; Mrs. Maurine Palmer McClosky, alto; Edgar Isherwood, tenor, and David Blair McClosky, bass. There is no admission charge and the public is invited. Last Sunday when Part I of the oratorio was sung the crowd was so great that several hundred people were unable to obtain even standing room.

Destroy Error, Heal the Sick

"Substance" is the subject of the lesson-sermon which will be read in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, March 13.

The Golden Text is: "Faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen" (Hebrews 11:1).

Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "And the prayer of faith shall save the sick, and the Lord shall raise him up; ar[illegible] if he have committed sins, they sh[illegible] be forgiven him." (James 5:15).

B[illegible]hop Lawrence in Winchester

Bishop Lawrence will preach in the Church of the Epiphany, Winchester, at 11 a. m. tomorrow. This will be Bishop Lawrence's first visit to the Winchester parish since 1925, and also since the Rev. Dwight W. Hadley became rector. The Rt. Rev. William Lawrence, sometimes affectionately termed bishop emeritus of the diocese he served so well for 34 years, is always eagerly welcomed whenever he accepts preaching engagements.

Fr. Connelly to Give Poetry Talk

The Rev. Terence Connolly, S. J., of Boston College, will speak for the Ace of Clubs Monday afternoon at Hotel Somerset on the poetry of Francis Thompson. He is to publish a book bearing his name next month through the Century Company.

Easter Sunrise Union Service

The Greater Boston Federation of Churches will hold its annual Easter sunrise service at the Parkman bandstand, Boston Common, on the morning of March 27, starting at 6:15 and closing at 6:50.

Forum Closes

Mrs. Emily Huwell Blair, former vice-chairman of the Democratic National Committee, will address the last audience of the season at the Old South Forum on "Women in Politics." A delegation of the Boston League of Women Voters will occupy one section of the auditorium. Mrs. Blair distinguished herself long before women could vote.

Dr. J. W. Brougher Preaches on 'I Thirst'

Last Sunday at Tremont Temple a large congregation listened to an impassioned sermon by the pastor of the Temple on the kind of thirst which tortured the body of Christ on the cross and a modern craving for alcoholic drink. Among other statements the doctor made were these:

"The appetite for intoxicating drink is an acquired one." "People want to drink liquor because they lack the mental stimulus and pep and power to enjoy life." "It is a substitute for personal magnetism and a vivacious interesting personality." "Sometimes it is an alibi for the doing of other things that are unseemly and wrong." 'It is a poison that enfeebles the will, affects the circulation of the blood and dulls the sensibilities of the nerves."

Tomorrow a. m. Dr. Brougher will preach on "A Church of Fickle Folks," and in the evening he will preach another sermon on the seven last sayings of Christ. He will also answer the questions, "Who is the meanest man in Boston?" and "Where is the safest place to hoard money?"

"Grace, Grit and Greenbacks"

The Rev. Laurence Breed Walker has extended an invitation to all citizens interested in a fearless discussion of current events to come to his forum address at the Buena Vista Church in Roxbury, next Wednesday. He is building up an audience to equal his 1200 who came to hear him in Portland, Me. Last Sunday he gave "A Protestant's view of Catholics." He not only speaks in a virile entertaining manner, but also furnishes music and light refreshments free. Already he has worked up to an audience of several hundreds. His topic next Wednesday is "Grace, Grit, and Greenbacks."

Help Immigrants

Miss Mary Guyton, supervisor of adult alien education in Boston, will be the speaker on Tuesday evening, March 19, in the 19th annual lecture course on charitable and social problems, given in conjunction with the evening classes of the Young Men's Catholic Association in the Boston College High School building, James st. Her subjects will be "Helping the Immigrant."

THOUSANDS TO ATTEND Y.M.C.A. RETREAT

Plans have been completed for the 57th annual retreat of the Young Mens Catholic Association of Boston, to be conducted in the church of the Immaculate Conception, Harrison ave. and East Concord st., beginning Sunday evening, March 13, at 7:45. An invitation is extended to all men of Greater Boston.

Both the upper and lower auditorium of the church will be used. Rev. John D. McCarthy, S. J., will conduct the services in the upper church, and Rev. Joseph J. Daley, S. J., of the Church of the Immaculate Conception, in the lower church.

The mission for non-Catholics held at the Cathedral of the Holy Cross will open tomorrow, and will continue through the week until Palm Sunday. The exercises will include a series of conferences on the church.

BOSTON WOMAN HONORED

Sister Mary Rose (Mary Decker) of Boston, has been named at Rome Superior General of the Missionary Sisters of the Society of Mary.

In 1919 she entered the Society's Mother House in Lyons, France and after her religious profession in 1922 she returned to Boston to assist in establishing a house for American subjects. Soon after returning to Boston, Sister Rose was named Superior of the convent at 13 Isabella st., Boston.

WASHINGTON

Today is the anniversary of a most important historical document, the reply of our first President to the felicitations addressed to him in the name of the Catholics of the United States.

The signatories of the letter which elicited Washington's historical reply were:—The Rt. Rev. John Carroll, Bishop of Baltimore, Charles Carroll of Carrollton, Daniel Carroll, Dominick Lynch and Thomas Fitzsimmons.

AT ST. STEPHEN'S

The novena of Thursdays in honor of St. Theresa of the Child Jesus will continue next week at St. Stephen's Church, Hanover St., Boston, with devotions at 12:20 (noon-day Mass), 3:30, 5:20 and 7:45 P. M.

Rev. Francis V. Murphy, D.D., will conduct the exercises and preach at 3:30 P. M. The preacher at 5:20 and 7:45 P. M. will be Rev. John E. Mullarkey of St. Joseph's Church, West End.

ST. PATRICK

The annual St. Patrick's observance of the St. Alphonsus Association will take place in St. Alphonsus Hall on Wednesday and Thursday evenings, March 16 and 17.

The observance of St. Patrick's day has been a custom long practiced by this society and its dramatic productions in keeping with it have delighted many and large audiences. This year a drama abounding in pleasing memories of Ireland, entitled "The Bells of Shannon," will be presented.

WASHINGTON AND PATRICK

The Catholic Union of Boston has planned for Friday evening, March 18, an event containing a double significance. On that evening tribute in word and song will be paid to St. Patrick, the celebration of whose birthday occurs on the day previous, and in addition, tribute will also be paid to the memory of George Washington, bicentennial observance of whose birthday is now being celebrated throughout the country.

The Future Belongs to Youth . . . What Will He Do With It?

Girls Given Choice of Ten Activities

A unique "choice party" was given last Monday at the Boston Young Women's Christian Association. Girls who came were asked to make their choice among 10 possible avenues of interest. A third of them selected "at your ease" which would seem to indicate just a restful time after a day's hard work. Others joined dramatics, craft work etc.

Y. W. C. A. ACTIVITIES

The next in the series of discussions for young people being conducted by Dr. Robert W. Coe at the Boston Y. W. C. A. will be held Tuesday evening at 7 o'clock. "Youth and Ideals" is a series open to young men as well as women.

On Thursday evening a service of music and worship will be held in the Meditation chapel for all groups in the Y. W. C. A., whether members or groups or individuals enrolled in activities. The hour is 6:30 o'clock. The cantata, "Hear My Prayer" will be given by the Y. W. C. A. glee club under the leadership of Miss Helen Barr.

Also on Thursday evening the next in the series "Youth Faces the Twentieth Century" will be held with Edwin S. Smith, commissioner of labor of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts as the speaker on "Youth Faces Industry." The hour is 7 o'clock.

Open recreation night will be held from seven to 10 o'clock on Friday with bowling, roller skating, swimming, floor and table games free to all girls of 18 years and older.

On Saturday the girl reserves will observe their inter-triangle day at the Clarendon st. activities center from 11 to three o'clock.

Mrs. Charles Fuller has been appointed president of the ODO Club of the Boston Y. W. C. A.

New Head for Catholic Y. M. A.

At the meeting of the board of government of the Young Men's Catholic Association, held last evening, Mr. O. Frank Hayes was elected president of the association to succeed Mr. James J. Mahar, for many years active president of the organization, but who was obliged to retire on account of the pressure of other duties.

Mr. Mahar has been connected for many years with the engineering department of the Boston school committee.

Healthiest Girl

Recently a young woman, Gertrude Heikes, who is a faithful member of the Lutheran Church in Salem, Nebraska, was given a 99.9 per cent rating at Chicago in the national contest for perfect health. Her pastor in writing of her said: "She is a girl of excellent character and very pleasing personality."

Goldstein Elected "Big Brother"

Horace A. Goldstein was elected president of the Jewish Big Brother Association at the 12th annual meeting held at the Jewish Welfare Center, 6 North Russell st., on Wednesday night, a constituent society of the Associated Jewish Philanthropies.

Youth in Russia, Jenny Lee's Topic

The Community Church meeting in Symphony Hall every Sunday morning has announced for tomorrow a young woman who was a member of The House of Commons in England. Miss Lee was elected to this high position when she was 24 years old.

Harvard Youth Becomes Minister

Rev. D. M. Greeley

Rev. Dana McL. Greeley, who has been called to the pastorate of the Unitarian Congregational Society in Lincoln, Mass., took up his duties there recently. He graduated from Harvard with the class of 1931. He is president of the Unitarian Young People's Religious Union, and has been in charge of the work of religious education at the Church of the Disciples, Boston, for the past two years.

Religion Essential

Payson Smith

SOCIETY cannot dodge its responsibility for the moral and spiritual welfare of youth. It is impossible to overestimate the parts in molding character played by the various influences that touch children. It is said that the great majority of boys who spend their youth in the so-called "Loop District" of Chicago are destined to criminal records. Yet no one can think that these boys in their fundamental characteristics are different from other boys. What befalls them later is the result in large measure of their environment. Parents take up their residence in what are called "good neighborhoods" for the sake of the influences which they believe will affect their children. How disjointed a society that accepts, apparently without much question, that there must be some children who perforce will be denied those beneficial surroundings. Childhood deserves the help of good homes, good schools, good reading and recreation. It deserves to be protected from the cheap, tawdry and sensational activities by which a greedy commercialism would exploit it. If children by the tens of thousands are to see movies that depict the exploits of gangsters and gunmen, society must expect that some of those children will later, through suggestion, try those careers. The Sunday School offers one important medium by which parents can secure for their children the services of devoted men and women who strive to bring into youthful life the vital force of religion. It is among the rights of childhood that it should, through church and home, have secured for it the righteous and steadying force of religious faith.

A message next week will come from the Rev. Thomas R. Reynolds, head of the Catholic Charitable Bureau.

DRAMA DISCUSSED By Nicholas Young ◆ Harleigh Schultz REVIEWS FILMS

Girl About Town

—By ALYCE SIEMENS—

My Desire

I nurture no ambition to write a thrilling drama,
Nor to be a famous sculptor, nor to paint a panorama.
I only want a penthouse far above the city's din
Where I can sit at night and wait until you stagger in.
—W. B. (Haverhill.)

Lifted from Life!

A wealthy society divorcee (of a couple of years), living in Newton, lost a jeweled pin one night last week . . . She advertised for its return, reward to be granted . . . Next day a young man's voice came inquiring across the phone wires . . . For description of the pin and the amount of reward to be given . . . He was told he'd get $25! . . . He said he'd found the Newtonite's pin and, taking the address, promised to return it the next day . . . However, the woman called her insurance men and, after finding she should have offered 10 per cent of the value of the pin (which was $1400), she began to worry about its return for such a meager sum . . . Much to her joy, the next day a seriously earnest young man returned her pin and was given $100 as a reward . . . Then it was that he told the woman what a terrific temptation he'd passed over . . . It seems, he's a Middle Westerner here working his way through college by being a baker, during the nighttime, at one of the Hub's Y. M. C. A.s . . . The day he picked the pin up on the street he was broke and had just had word from home that there was much sickness, with his father losing his job . . . He took the pin to a jeweler who offered to buy it for $600 . . . But even though her $25 was a small mite compared with the jeweler's, he wanted to have a clear conscience . . . The Newtonite is going to keep an eye on him, aid him along in his scholastic pursuit . . . And so, that's what one chap was able to do—with an honest smile—hard times be what they are . . . It's good to hear things like this . . . It helps keep that upper lip stiff these days, doesn't it?

Pickups

Jeanette Richards may always be seen at every important first night . . . Always smart, always in black . . . Always different! . . . When "Pudding on the Ritz" is premiered, March 29, it will be the Hasty Pudding Club's 86th annual flair . . . A piano sextette and an accordion sextette, as innovations, will show that Harvard men are learning what girls would much rather like to hear sometimes, 'stead of so much of that broad "a" blab that some of them hand out so profusely! . . . Lynn's Mrs. Francis S. Breed (all smiley and happy as usual), Mrs. Charlie Pinkham—so much like Garbo, Mrs. Joseph Stout—in a smart olive green outfit, all attended the "Vincent Ventures" matinee Thursday . . . They were snooping 'cause their crowd on the North Shore will soon do a sort of theatrical . . . And pert little Mrs. Roger Haskell, with a devastating brown sailor over one eye, was rushing for her Marblehead train as early as four-thirty! . . . Well, it's hard to please those Junior Aiders since their "Jr. Aid Parade" of last May, anyhow.

Going Places!

Wed. . . . 9 p. m. and the Fine Arts Theater is jammed . . . For a change, there is a good stage presentation, not smacking of the amateur . . . Hans Wiener with Otto (Monocle Man) Aschermann and their society dance group have taken possession of the tiny stage . . . It's a distinctive program, with Wiener's "Herold" and Otto's clever "Waggish Humor" dance the hits . . . Would that we dared to tell here the joke that Otto so impishly told Manager George Kraskas just before the curtains parted . . . "Just to get in the humor,' said Otto . . . "Is my face red? . . . It should be," retorted Kraska . . .

Later at the Grove: Edwin Biltcliffe kids Grace Donahue about her "lines" . . . But takes it all back when Sophie Tucker chants how no one has ever yet found a fat girl in an Old Maid's Home! . . . We count the moist eyes in the place as Sophie finishes her "That's What Heaven Means to Me" number . . . Marvel, too, a bit over the woman's humanness and artistry in doing what she does with sort of melodramaticy lyrics . . . No one but the grand Sophie could do that! . . . We chat with cute Dorothy Dow Lossez—in smart black and with such a little-girl face that it's hard to realize she's a pretty special little mother to two of the impishest tots in Lynn! . . . (What a chump that chap was) . . .

Rudy and Paul Do a Howdy!

It's midnight . . . Rudy Vallee, his jolly dad, Charles Vallee, Rudy's lovely sister—in pale blue satin—and friends from Westbrook are having plenty of wholesome fun about the huge round table at the Salle Moderne . . . Mrs. Lou Conrad, petite and pensive, is the hostess and nods proudly when Rudy and the oh-so-changed Paul Whiteman say those few words during her husband Lou's local broadcast . . . Rudy is cheerful . . . Paul is sick and fretful . . . Papa Vallee, in neighborly fashions, tells us about his very recent 6500-mile good-will-for-Maine trip he's just made . . . "We went through 28 states . . . were entertained in 23 of them . . . Just think of it!" . . . He says much about his younger son, Bill, who is columnistically minded, by the way . . . In fact, it may not be long before Bill will be doing a N. Y. pillar, and since he's a mean cartoonist, will illustrate his gossipings himself.

Drama, Too, Prepares to Fast

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

These are the drama's dullest days—especially in New England, where the sackcloth-and-ashes spirit of Lenten observance diverts good men and women from sensual pleasures. For these two weeks before Easter it is the motion picture editor that rides a high horse on this page; for the movies halt not, nor even hesitate at the exhortations of earnest prelates. Whereupon the legitimate drama modestly subsides while the cinema flies impiously in the face of Providence.

• • •

Except for Blanche Yurka, who shifts allegiance from Ibsen to Shaw at the Hollis, the in-town playhouses are sealed as tightly as a padlocked speakeasy. Harkening to the call of art, Miss Yurka, proposes a week of "Candida" which has been classified by experts as the best of Shaw's plays—probably the very best. In any event Miss Yurka will keep the Drama's torch alight for another week and have the downtown field all to herself. Only the pesky movies will, or can, set up any rivalry. If the legitimate theater, for the moment, is speechless; if its doors are closed and its lights dimmed, the playgoer may feel no great anxiety. The theater is dormant, not dead. Following closely upon the Easter eggs will come the usual crushing invasion.

• • •

Among the most important of the post-Lenten attractions is what is euphoniously called the Bostonians, an organization which proposes to revive the smartest of recent musical comedies and operettas and to merchandise them at prices that fit the times. Only the use of the Boston Opera House could make this possible, for if prices are to be pared down to slim wallets the recompense must be found in ample seating capacity. Which is why Messrs. A. G. Monroe, et al, discern more than a glimmer of hope in the noble experiment.

• • •

For many seasons there has been a great clamor against theater prices—and with sound reason. All commodities, even those of the theater, are worth no more than their selling value. And these ambitious Bostonians have laid plans accordingly; they propose to go back to first principles. For the opening experiment, Schwab and Mandel's musical romance, "The New Moon," with an adequate cast, will take the stage and sing lustily for a top price of $1.50, and will lift the same voices at matinees for the slim price of $1. There will be even 25-cent seats for those who are thrifty.

• • •

Without drifting into excessive speculation, it may be remarked that the St. Louis Civic Opera company was sent on its way in similar fashion, with the result that St. Louis annually has eight to ten weeks of operetta and never loses a cent. In popular summer entertainment of the better grade St. Louis has become the nation's leader. In St. Louis it is a quasi-public operation; the city furnishes a splendid open air auditorium, and public-spirited men stand back of the productions. The public is squarely behind the movement, because the individual costs are low and the returns exceptional. It would seem that any well ordered city might profit by this example. The Bostonians will give Boston its chance.

George White and his "Scandals" leave town tonight with a record in receipts never equalled by a local show playing at a top price of $3.00. During the week box-office receipts have been a steady scramble between perspiring tellers and impetuous buyers who demanded admittance where none was available. The ticket sellers are thankful the week is over. The gross for six days will run up to $45,000—not so bad for hard times.

Enid Romany, who gives grace and talent to "Murray Hill," new play at the Copley.

ADVENTUROUS

Helen Hayes, the faithful nurse of "Arrowsmith," now showing at Loew's Orpheum.

'Road to Life'

Thelma Burenberg, author of "Red Russia Speaks," is another American to come forward with praise for the Russian talking picture, 'Road to Life,' now breaking records at the Fine Arts Theater, and being held for a second week. She says:

"When I saw 'Road to Life,' I was brought back to Russia, to the pitiful, tiny scavengers that infested the streets. I want to impress the fact that the producers of this film did not order its scrip department to write a 'punch-proof' story. The directors saw a vitally human story staring them daily in the face. So they turned the camera right into the streets of Russia, and into the institutions, and the children, in their naive, blunt way, enacted their lives.

"From a standpoint of art—the picture ranks as one of the finest screened. But it is the honest and intelligent treatment of the subject matter, the realism which it so vividly portrays, that aroused my profound interest."

Park Theater

The double feature program at the Park Theater, beginning today is headed by "Air Eagles." In the cast are Lloyd Hughes and Norman Kerry, supported by Shirley Grey, Matt Kemp and Otis Harlan. The second feature is "Mounted Fury," a drama of the Northwest. Short comedy reels and the news reel complete the program.

Guests for Photoplay

Members of the staff of the Judge Baker Foundation have accepted an invitation from the manager of the Fine Arts Theater to attend the showing of this "Road to Life" this afternoon.

The Week's Bills

HOLLIS—Blanche Yurka in Bernard Shaw's "Candida." Generally accepted as the best of the Shavian library of plays. Included in the supporting cast are Alexander Onslow, Robert Henderson, Horace Hicks, Virginia Baker and Doris Rich. One week only.

• • •

COPLEY—"Murray Hill," a comedy by Leslie Howard. Included in the cast are Shepperd Strudwick, Joseph Cotten, Enid Romany, Amy Loomis, Aldrich Bowker and Helen Ray. Staged by E. P. Goodnow.

It might be assumed from this scene in "The Devil Passes" that Diana Wynyard is playing girlish tricks upon the more mature Arthur Byron. The play is marked for the Colonial on March 28.

Lew Ayres Handles Scalpel to Remove 'Film Appendix'

By HARRIS MORGAN

In print Donald Henderson Clarke's "The Impatient Virgin" was supposed to have the lure of an ultra sexy story. It comes to the screen as "The Impatient Maiden," toned down in title and narrative, and yet proving entertainment which the RKO-Keith audience seemed to enjoy to the utmost.

• • •

If you read the book, you know that a certain maiden, employed as secretary to a divorce lawyer, decides married life is not for her. An accident brings a young doctor her way; the two fall hard for one another. But she won't wed, for she fears a drab domestic life as he struggles onward to success. She suggests another way out, but he scorns this, and leaves her in high dudgeon. So her boss rigs out a swanky apartment for her, and when the hero is summoned by a hurry call for a doctor, the heroine being down with appendicitis, he thinks the worst has happened. It hasn't, but how is the poor fellow to know that? Anyway, he cuts out the appendix, and everything smooths out later in the recuperation days.

To our able young friend, Lew Ayres, is entrusted the role of the hospital interne, and a boyish doctor he is, boyish in looks and speech and manner. He may be miscast, but his admirers will go into ecstacies over him all the same; he looks the lover, and does his romancing in the best Hollywood style. Mae Clarke is the lassie in the case; she does not measure up to the needs, but looks attractive enough. Far better is Una Merkel, who may be said to "steel" the picture, for she promotes laughter the whole way, and has a number of vastly amusing sequences.

Best of the men is John Halliday, entirely satisfactory as the lawyer boss. Andy Devine helps the comedy finely.

The program has some excellent "short" features, and Mr. Weber makes the organ eloquent with varied selections, received with much applause.

Lady of Films Is on Stage

Miss Irene Rich, one of the screen's most gracious stars, is appearing in person at the RKO-Keith-Boston, as the headline attraction in a playlet called "Ask Your Wife." Miss Rich brings with her a small company including Al Webster and Harold Elliott.

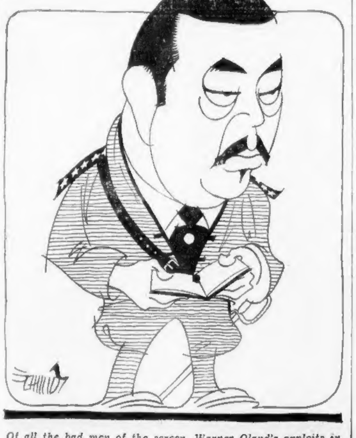
The team of Annie, Judy and Zeke, who call themselves "The Three Georgia Crackers," is another of the featured acts this week, as is the Norman Thomas Quintet in a "Jamboree of Harlem Mania."

Smart the Cue to Be Dumb

Seven acts will make up the stage show at the Scollay Square next week. Most of the bill will run to comedy, but there will be singing, dancing, instrumental music and acrobatics. The headliner will be the character actor, William Edmunds, in a sketch "Taking a Test," which is a musical farce.

Jim and Nancy Kelly will try to prove that you have to be smart to be so dumb. Ralph Olsen has a large supporting cast in a comedy, singing and dancing sketch of "Sals and Sailors."

CINEMA'S YELLOW PERIL



Of all the bad men of the screen, Warner Oland's exploits in "Shanghai Express" at the Paramount and Uptown place him in the vanguard of villainy. Sketched by Charles Schmidt.

La Argentina, who will present a dance program at Symphony Hall next Wednesday.

Blanche Yurka

To go from Ibsen to Shaw in the play line may appear to be more like a leap than a hop, skip and a jump, but if you know your dramaturgy you need not be informed that Bernard Shaw took Ibsen for his master when he went to writing plays. In fact, Shaw was the first champion of Ibsen when the Norwegian was the object of attack by the convention revering British critics and came as a revolutionary writer to invade the English stage. As an active advocate, Shaw wrote a book of 240 pages in which he lambasted the die-hard London press men.

However easy or difficult it may be to go from Ibsen to Shaw, it surely is no hardship for Blanche Yurka who likes doing the difficult. So next week, which she calls her farewell week at the Hollis, in presenting Shaw's "Candida," she will be the sole bearer of the torch of the drama among the intown theaters, all to the delectation of those who like their drama.

Violin Yields All to Youth

Europe received Yehudi Menuhin last summer no longer as a prodigy but as an artist of maturity and true greatness. The violinist's subsequent appearances in American cities have confirmed this estimate. Menuhin, now 15, will make his second appearance in Boston when he plays tomorrow afternoon in Symphony Hall at 3:30.

The accompanist by Arthur Balsam in the following program: Beethoven's "Kreutzer" Sonata, Bruch's Concerto in G minor; Sonata for violin alone in A minor, by J. S. Bach; Andante Sostenuto (from the sonata No. 24), by Mozart; La Ronde des Lutins (the dance of the goblins), by Bazzini; Tambourin Chinois, by Kreisler, and Caprice XXIV, by Paganini.

Looking Ahead

MARCH 26—
"If Booth Had Missed" at the Shubert.
MARCH 28—
"The Devil Passes" at the Colonial.
"Hay Fever" at the Plymouth.
MARCH 30—
"The New Moon" at the Boston Opera House.
APRIL 2—
"The Secret Garden" (one performance) at the Repertory.
April 11—
Abbey Theater Irish Players at the Hollis.

Alice Cowan, appearing in "If Booth Had Missed," coming to the Shubert on March 28.

Colman Stars at Orpheum

Ronald Colman in "Arrowsmith," is being presented at Loew's Orpheum. The story is one of one man's devotion and ambition in the battle of humanity against the death-dealing plagues which have always been the scourge of mankind. It sweeps in locale from a small western town to a tropical island in the West Indies. A broad current of romance runs through its stirring scenes in the relations of young Dr. Arrowsmith and the little nurse he marries as a struggling doctor.

The shining comedy light of vaudeville and musical comedy, Billy House, last seen in Boston in "Luckee Girl," headlines the new vaudeville bill with a large company in a riotous comedy sketch called "Resolutions." Jack North, "The Bounding Banjokester," and Mack, Harold and Bobby, "A Little of This and That," are other headliners. Among the other acts appearing are Sidney Tracey and Bessie Ray, assisted by Paul Humphreys in a distinctive dance offering.

A program of short screen features and Hearst Metrotone News are included in the show.

The Glamor Is Greater Close by

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

A new "in person" screen star is drawn near. That lady who always gives account of her talent and personal charm in the movies, Miss Lilyan Tashman, steps before the footlights at the Metropolitan this week; she is on the "spot" and looks good in its glare. Moreover, she wears exceedingly "clingy" gowns, making one change right out there in front of the packed house—but mostly in hiding.

• • •

If that were all, it would be only what might be written of a number of the Hollywood actresses. But Miss Tashman has ability, and displays it. Moreover, laughs glisten through her sketch; she has a fine sense of humor. She can also act, and does. One doesn't have to record that her appearance is a triumph; but it should, in justice to her husband, Edmund Lowe, be added that the mere mention of his name in the course of the show elicits tremendous applause to prove that he, too, is popular with the fans. The rest of the stage bill at the Met is above par; notably, Ranny Weeks, singing magnificently and winning new ovations; Fabien Sevitzky, acknowledging rare plaudits as he finishes conducting the orchestra through a medley of overture music, and the revue, the stirring number of which is a loop-the-loop bicycle feat.

• • •

The photoplay is "Dancers in the Dark," set about the fortunes of a lassie in a dime-a-dance hall. Miriam Hopkins has a past, but Buster Collier doesn't mind that. But he goes haywire later when he discovers his pal, Jack Oakie, has done his worst to queer the romance. Interwoven is the crook theme which brings peril near for the principals; and comedy is expertly handled by Eugene Pallette.

• • •

The intricacies are clearly mapped and the action is commendably fast, with a result that the interest is intrigued and gripped. It is not a great narrative, but it is expertly handled. Oakie does his best picture work as the orchestra leader; Miss Hopkins is effective at all times. An outstanding performer in a small part is Lyda Roberti, making her screen bow. This girl will be recalled as Queen of the Flower Show during the Boston tercentenary. She shines in all she does, acting, singing and dancing.

Laughter Explodes as Screen Riots in Aerial Hilarity

The screen at Loew's State goes air-minded with a comic vengeance this week. "Sky Devils" gets its laughs on terra firma, and then goes zooming to add to the fun. The spirit of this aviation picture is purely one of fun for the sake of fun: and hilarity is its keynote.

Fortunately for what there is of plot, the movie had Edward Sutherland for director, and a quartette of male performers who can act. The story, and some of the "gags" are reminiscent of past deeds in films; but for our enjoyment, director and leading actors take the bit in their teeth and make merry for long stretches, wherein one can unbend and give vent to a liking for comedy.

Spencer and Tracy are a couple of buddies taking it easy as lifeguards at the inevitable Coney Island beach; William Boyd—the Bill of the stage background—butts into their scheme of things, and later becomes the evil genius to muss up Tracy's skein of happiness. They all, of course, find themselves in the same unit at the war front; but not until they have numerous more or less ingenious incidents and escapades. They're in the flying corps, of which the colonel is our old king of clowning, Billy Bevan; they meet up with French lassies in the course of events, go A. W. O. L., and find themselves in a dizzy whirl of more or less silly adventure, inside and out the enemy lines.

While not measuring up to classic teams of other days in the cinema, Boyd and Tracy portray their roles superbly. Cooper is fine as the boob third, and Bevan is at his best, which means he is splendid.

Ann Dvorak, a newcomer, reveals physical charms and a pleasing personality and voice. Her part is not hard in its demands for talent, so she remains inconspicuous except in the undress scenes.

From the aviation standpoint, the features of the film are its corking good comedy stunting, and the serious sections which seem to be left-over film clippings from "Hell's Angels."

"Sky Devils" is a rollicking, frolicking flight by Director Sutherland, as pilot, with Tracy, Boyd and the others as aids. Often it's rowdy sport, but it's laughable; and from that point of view, the picture is highly diverting entertainment. H. S.

NEIGHBORLY

Alice Kennedy smiles her way through "World of Pleasure" at the Old Howard.

Man of Action Is the Star

There is a super-attraction at the Old Howard beginning Monday matinee in the person of Buck Jones, movie star, who will offer something of interest to all patrons. He features "A Day on the Ranch," and will relate some of his experiences in pictures.

The burlesque is furnished by the Old Howard Stock Company, an organization that has 11 principals. Fred (Falls) Binder and Mike Sacks are stars. Mlle. Verne, Parisian stepper. Alice Kennedy, Nona Francis and Gypsy Rae Reed are featured. Also in the cast are Charles (Boob) Smith, Lester Mack, Myra Worth and Gertrude Reed.

Vaudeville acts include Cardini in "Watch the Cigarette," and Rath Brothers in a balancing act.

The pictures will be "Guilty Generation" with Leo Carillo and Constance Cummings, and Tim McCoy in "One Way Trail."

The midnight show comes Friday with special features.

"WHAT PRICE GLORY" IS TO BE MADE AS TALKIE

THE VOICE OF BROADWAY

By LOUIS SOBOL

A Night on Broadway!

I'm going to present to you a rare document. One night out of the life of a girl who came to the city to make good—but became what I've labeled a "creep-jane." I met her the other evening and she was low. I mean, she was at the point where she was ready to accept the moist embrace of the East River although she's still beautiful enough, it seems to me, to invite the embrace of some Broadway gent who could decorate her wrists with bracelets she could hock. She's been out of work since last April—and she's not kidding herself. Things look tough. At any rate, here is how her story goes—and please believe me, it's presented exactly as she wrote it.

My first taste of night-club life—Texas Guinan's Club Argonaut just before it folded up. Tawdry, cramped, unbeautiful . . . but teeming with that certain Broadway Something which could not be denied. Men in evening clothes, women in spangled gowns, and jewels and furs. Edna Leedom, slightly plumpish and her nice-looking millionaire husband. Eight inches of diamond bracelets cover her smooth, white arm. And both look politely bored. Directly across the room, another beauteous blonde takes off her mink coat and settles on the wall bench. She chats animatedly but there is a certain tragic gayety about her which deceives no one.

Walter Donaldson's huge bulk before a tiny toylike piano playing his latest hit, "You're Driving Me Crazy" . . . just released, from Alimony Jail and full of the joy of life. A leg drops off the piano, is replaced, and the music goes on. An inebriated gent at a ringside seat slides quietly to the floor and is taken in the back room to be revived. Tex, on a tiny chair, greets the incoming suckers. A small party arrives. A boy in a coonskin coat waves. "Lester, who's that?" asks Texas. "Al Smith, Jr." . . . "Folks, give our Al a great big hand. Yaaay!" Something boyishly sweet about the good-looking son of the ex-Governor. Tex kisses him seven times in quick succession while the crowd applauds.

The orchestra plays the Donaldson hit. The music is brittle and jazzy. A matronly lady in a backless silvercloth gown rises to dance with her tall, dark, intriguing-looking gigolo. He kisses the nape of her fat neck. She giggles coyly. Her feet are slim and aristocratic, her hair white and marcelled, her eyes a faded blue. Over her shoulder the tall lad gives the glad eye to a stunning black-haired damsel in lipstick red.

The Boy Friend, made mellow by the friendly atmosphere, shows Tex a snapshot of the pride-and-joy (tsktsk) and like the good egg she is, Tex eggs him on and everybody's happy. A girl in white chiffon leans over and informs her boy friend she craves a dance . . . he has silvery hair and wears black pearl shirt studs and has a Bostonian accent. It's a great place, the Guinan joy palace . . . you don't have to dance with the guy who brung yuh . . . the gal with him is a phony . . . court earrings from Woolworth's and rayon silk undies underneath the transparent white chiffon . . . her escort dances with vigor, though with decorum, too, and albeit he pleads his cause wisely and well, he is minus my telephone number at the end.

Now the gigolo is dancing intimately with the black-haired charmer while his Lady of the Evening chats animatedly with a sleepy-eyed individual wearing two carnations. (He doesn't know it but the cost of those posies will appear on his check—and how!) (Sez you, gal! When you buy carnations in a night club you pay the girl when you get them. Sorry to interrupt you.)

The Guinan gang warbles, struts, dances, wisecracks, poses in the nearly nude . . . clappers clap . . . voices drown the songsters . . . loud greetings are flung . . . Tex adds to the bedlam from her precarious perch. An ineb gets up and slaps her on the back . . . he is put in his place politely but effectively . . . there is something about Tex I can't define, something big and warm and understanding.

"Enjoying yourself, girlie?" Oh, Tex, if you only knew how much!

A slim, pale-faced chap in a blue shirt and business suit watches the crowd through half-closed eyes. He gets up lazily and comes over to our table. "Dance?" My escort agrees and goes over to talk to a grim-visaged gent in tails, an ex-judge, maybe? The pale-faced lad advises me to try movie shorts. "Got seven running on Broadway this week, myself," he says casually. "How thu-rilling!" . . . "Tell you what I'll do," says he. "I'll send you a sample to show you how's done. What's the name?" . . . I give him my card as the Boy Friend looks over a trifle resentfully . . . "Tired?" he shouts, hopefully . . . "Me? ? Should say not!" I say. "Please may I stay a while longer?" The pale young man has promised to introduce me to a couple of columnists who usually breakfast here at six. "Stick around?" the pale young man has urged.

I watch the mink-coated, tragic-eyed blonde at my right, out of the corner of my eye. Must be my age. But beautiful! Our eyes meet, we both smile—and the next thing I know a wooden clapper is flung on my table and on it a message: "What makes you so charming," in a schoolgirl scrawl. Charming?? . . . It must be the smoke in the room or else she is near-sighted. Charming? I laugh to myself but make no attempt to disillusion her. I borrow the pale one's pencil and write on another clapper: "I think you are the most beautiful girl in this room" . . . she catches the message, reads it, and her face lights up. Her face is like a beautiful lamp lighted from the inside. Her eyes grow warm and sparkling, her mouth is upturned. Then, as though someone blew a cold breath, the light goes out, her face assumes its mask-like look, the lovely mouth droops, the eyes are sad.

"You remind me of Mona, my classmate at Goucher."—"Do you come here often?"—"My first visit."—"Why are you so sad?"—"Why are you so lovely?" I still have the clappers with their scrawled messages from the blonde beauty.

"Who IS she?" I murmur to the Pale Young Man Who Knows Everyone. A swarthy-faced man comes to her table, and our delightful word-flinging is over. "Once known as Ziggy's most beautiful Follies girl—Hilda Ferguson—now getting all the rotten Broadway breaks." Another ex-Follies girl across the room is being helped into her sables by her attentive husband . . . Edna Leedom smiles brightly at Techs as they make their exit . . . the wee sma' hours are getting wee-er . . . the gigolo (and is he handsome! Looks like a football captain) gazes meltingly into the faded blue eyes of the fullbosomed matron . . . Young Al dozes contentedly at his table . . . the tempo of the crowd slackens.

"Let's go," says the Boy Friend sleepily. He helps me into my $22.50 fur cloth . . . "Goodbye Beautiful!" I call to my blonde lady . . . she smiles wistfully, blows a kiss . . . check . . . taxi . . . home.

And I thought, emerging from the tinsel and glitter of Tech's hangout: they are no different—these people of Broadway, than the men and women of New Jersey or Baltimore or Paris, Ky. They agonize over the same problem . . . they laugh in public and weep in private . . . they hate, lose, hope, suffer, love, die just like the rest of us.

But there are two points I want to bring out in this blurbing . . . one, the picture of a beautiful blonde girl with a defiant smile on the front page of all the tabs—not so much later—my lovely lady of the wistful eyes—Hilda Ferguson.

And the second point is this: The pale-faced youth in a blue shirt and business suit and tired eyes forgot to get in touch with me with those samples, and if he sees this, I hope he remembers that night when he sat at the table with a girl in a black, plain dress and a tiny green felt hat and a $22.50 fur cloth coat—and raised her hopes to the skies. He ought to remember for she was the only female in the whole room who was not in evening dress.

It would be nice if he remembers because I need his help.

Maybe I'm Wrong (About Hollywood)

—By JOHN P. MEDBURY—

Hollywood, Cal., March 12—A dizzy little extra dame went to the Hollywood Hospital a few days ago for a minor operation, but the staff physician decided that an anaesthetic would be advisable. "Gosh," said the girl, nervously, "if I take chloroform, how long will it be fore I know anything?"

"Well," replied the doctor, "that's a rather difficult question to answer. You can't expect too much of an anaesthetic."

There's a pretty little movie star who says she's sorry that she has but one face to give to the soap advertisements.

Bert Kalmar, the song writer, has just written a new number entitled "That's Warts Worrying Me Now" and says he can't get anybody to take it off his hands.

A hotel house detective is the most resourceful man in town. When he wants to quickly disguise himself, he just jerks off his toupee, rolls it up and wears it under his nose like a moustache.

A certain movie executive has been so busy lately that he's having his doctor take out only one tonsil at a time.

Somebody asked Wilson Mizner how a producer treated his scenario. "Great," said Bill, "he sent it back in fine condition."

Spencer Tracy Cast as Flagg, Ralph Bellamy Is Sergeant Quirt

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Motion Picture Editor Universal Service, Inc.

(Copyright, 1932, by Universal Service, Inc.)

Los Angeles, March 12—The fighting words that made "What Price Glory" such a hit both on the stage and in the silent pictures will be heard in the talkies. Fox is reviving what was probably their greatest success and with a new cast. Big league exhibitors have expressed a desire for a repeat on this unusual war play which featured the comedy as well as the drama of war.

Louella O. Parsons

Spencer Tracy has the difficult precedent of following the late Louis Wolheim and Victor McLaglen as Captain Flagg. No less difficult is Ralph Bellamy's lot and that is to equal the performance William Boyd gave on the stage and Edmund Lowe gave on the screen.

These two roles taken care of there is still Charmaine to consider. Leyla Georges and Dolores Del Rio are extremely difficult to follow. Yet the Fox Company is certain somewhere in Hollywood there is a girl of Latin type who can play the French vamp. William K. Howard directs—and his choice is a good one.

Joan Weds Next Week

Early next week is the time set for the wedding of Joan Bennett and Gene Markey. Joan finishes "The Trial of Vivian Ware" in a few days and her marriage to Gene will take place probably Monday or Tuesday. Funny story "The Trial of Vivian Ware." There were 24 shooting days on it and William K. Howard, director, delivered it seven days before schedule to the Fox Company. When the picture was run it was discovered it was two reels short, so he had to make 1800 more feet before it could be released. It is these additional scenes Joan Bennett is now making. She will have a quiet wedding with only eight persons present, and after a brief honeymoon she will begin work on her next picture, "Week-end Girl."

Heard and Overheard

Marie Dressler expects to start work in two weeks on "Prosperity." What a reception they will give her when she returns to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Charley Chase had a mad on at Hal Roach. He wanted more money and as you know, it's no time to ask for a raise in salary. At any rate, he left the Roach company and went on a vaudeville tour. But after the movies he didn't care so much for the two-a-day. He is back again and signed up on a new contract. I don't know what was done about money. Mr. Roach isn't telling and Mr. Chase isn't telling but the important thing is he is back at the studio where he has worked for 12 years. Out at M.-G.-M. they are denying vehemently that Marcel De Sano is in the East taking tests of Jean Harlow for "The Red-Headed Woman." Marcel, we reported, had gone East sick. I don't think any of us will forgive M.-G.-M. if they put the platinum blonde in that role. It would be just too bad.

Leo Sowerby's "Prairie" Fails to Stir Symphony Audience

By MOSES SMITH

Leo Sowerby, Chicago composer, makes his bow to local Symphony-concert-goers in this week's program of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, which, under Serge Koussevitzky, presents "Prairie," a poem for orchestra, after the poem of the same name by Carl Sandburg.

Those who come to hear cacophony are disappointed, as evidenced by the performance at yesterday's matinee, nor does one hear the amusing vulgarity of such fetching pieces as "The Irish Washerwoman," which have been played at piano recitals here. The fact that the work was first performed by a high school orchestra should have been sufficient warning that, heavy as was the orchestration, the harmonic content would not be "impossible."

Nor was it, in actual performance, though Sowerby is hardly lady-like in his methods. The musical mood is presumably evocative of the subject expressed by the title. Easterners can hardly judge decisively whether the composer has been successful in this respect. Even if he has, the music seemed to us monotonous, dull; climaxes seemed unprepared. The music did not grow, it did not flow; it simply sounded. For once, at least, we found ourselves in thorough accord with a conservative audience, which, being unable to make anything of this tonal discourse, scarcely bestirred itself to applaud. We assume, though we cannot guarantee, that the orchestral performance was competent.

Stravinsky's "Pulcinella" suite, revived after a single hearing 10 years ago, fared better. One's enjoyment would have been keener if the program notes, instead of dilating on various performances, had given the listener some clue as to the connection between the movements of the suite and the scenario of the ballet.

C. P. E. Bach's D major concerto (arranged by Steinberg), Debussy's Nocturnes, "Nuages" and "Fetes," and Strauss' "Till Eulenspiegel" were the other numbers on the program. The performance of the Strauss work was brilliant—excessively brilliant and labored. This Till had apparently exhausted his merry pranks, and his youthful zest had become heavy-girthed pompousness.

Wild 'n' Woolly

To the Bowdoin Square, beginning tomorrow and to continue for the first half of the week, will come Buck Jones, cowboy and picture star. He appears in "A Day at the Ranch." The vaudeville will include six big acts.

In the picture bill is "The Beast of the City," with Walter Huston, Jean Harlow, Wallace Ford and Jean Hersholt. Another feature is "A Private Scandal," with Marian Nixon and Lloyd Hughes.

Gayety Theater

Starting tomorrow the Gayety screen show will feature Slim Summerville and Zasu Pitts in "The Unexpected Father," and "The Devil Plays," with Dorothy Christie and Richard Tucker. Five vaudeville acts are also included on the bill.

ADVANCES ARE RULE IN WALL ST. TRADING

New York, March 12—Advances were the rule in today's trading on the New York Stock Exchange. A total of 208 issues registered gains over Friday's finish, while 123 showed declines.

The stock market stiffened as shorts took their rather meagre profits at the close of the week.

CHANGES ARE MANY

The list eased a little at the start, but the decline of the previous session appeared to have lost its momentum and the market soon developed a better tone. A few shares actually pushed up to close a point or so higher, but most changes were fractional.

Trading was extremely listless, particularly toward the end of the two-hour session, and the turnover was only about half a million shares. The closing tone was steady

U. S. Steel and General Electric were fractionally higher. Among issues up a point or so were Allied Chemical, Drug, Inc., North American, American Can, and Consolidated Gas. Atchison and Union Pacific each pushed up more than a point, then yielded part of their gains.

Considerable selling came into Kreuger & Toll, which yielded fractionally. This company is adversely affected by omission of dividends on its block of International Telephone, and its far-flung operations have been hampered by financial and monetary difficulties of various countries in which the Swedish Match group have interests.

This issue changed hands in large blocks, accounting for a substantial portion of the day's dealings.

B. & O. SOFT SPOT

Baltimore & Ohio was a soft spot in the rails, the common sagging fractionally and the preferred declining about 2 points to a new low.

Copper shares failed to respond much to the announcement that the international producers had reached an agreement in principal on production curtailment and continuation of Copper Exporters, Inc., as the international selling agency. Some interests in the industry feel that the reduction of output to 20 from 26 per cent of capacity was not drastic enough.

Weeked business and trade reports continued to stress the better feeling resulting from the impressive improvement in banking and credit conditions.

The Curb market took on a somewhat brighter complexion in a quiet week-end session today.

Price changes were largely limited to minor fractions, but the selling which came into the Electric Bond & Share group and other sections of the list yesterday was checked, and small recoveries appeared here and there. The closing tone was steady to firm.

Electric Bond & Shares finished a fraction higher, apparently reflecting short covering. It was pointed out in brokerages circles that there has apparently been some selling based on the erroneous belief that the company has omitted its preferred dividends. Ordering of these payments has merely been deferred pending approval of the recapitalization plan.

Firm Changes Told by Secretary Rich

Secretary George A. Rich of the Boston Stock Exchange today announced two more firm changes. Harold G. Meadows, Jr., has retired from Tifft Brothers. Andrew G. Lindbohm has retired from N. H. Griffith & Co.

Fuel Oil Sales at New Month's Peak

Fuel oil sales of distributing subsidiaries of National Service Companies operating in larger New England cities for February amounted to 5,405,265 gallons, a record month for the companies. This compares with 2,624,731 gallons in February last year, an increase of over 100 per cent.

Associated System Electric Output Off

Associated Gas & Electric System reports for the week ended March 5, 1932, an electric output of 50,063,016 k. w. h., a decline of 5.8 per cent under the corresponding week of 1931. Gas output totaled 337,619,500 cubic feet, off 9 per cent from the same week 1st year.

Cotton Lower in New York Market

New York, March 12—Cotton futures closed one to two points lower. March 6.88, May 6.98-99, July 7.15-16, Oct. 7.36, Dec. 7.53, Jan. 7.60. Spot quiet; middling 7.05.

St. Paul February Earnings Lower

Gross revenue of the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Pacific Railroad amounted to $6,800,000, according to preliminary estibates yesterday. In February, 1931, gross totaled $8,556,910.

TODAY'S NEWS OF LIVE STOCKS

Inability of the railroad shares to follow the recent advance in other sections of th elist was again stressed today as an unfavorable technical factor in the market. While the carriers are now receiving the benefits of a 10 per cent wage reduction, the heavy applications for loans from the Reconstruction Cirp. give a none too encouraging picture of the railroad financial situation.

An unofficial tabulation of loans requested shows a total of more than $295,000,000. Up to March 1, the I. G. C. had approved advances of about $53,000,000.

New Sponsorship Seen for Hershey

New sponsorship is reported to have been formed for Hershey Chocolate.

Northern Pacific's Unique Showing

Balance sheet of Northern Pacific at the end of January is nearly unique among railroad statements, a well known brokerage firm points out. Ratio of current assets to current liabilities was reduced from 4.1 times to 3.5 times in the year. Cash and marketable securities alone were slightly more than double total current liabilities.

Funded Debt Is Sharply Reduced

Funded debt of Northern Pacific maturing within six months was less than $250,000, but actually the road is without any important maturity until 1996. Fact that its subsidiary investment company is still in a position to pay extra dividends has modified but not altogether removed fears concerning the outcome of the parent unit's next dividend meeting due March 23.

Baltimore & Ohio Preferred Heavy

Recent heaviness of Baltimore & Ohio $4 non-cumulative preferred has intensified interest in the forthcoming meeting of directors for dividend action on the stock. The board is scheduled to hold its next session the middle of next week. Action of the issue has led some in the financial district to anticipate possible omission of the preferred payment. The stock is selling close to its bear market low with an indicated yield of nearly 15 per cent. The $4 dividends on the preferred has been paid regularly since 1900.

American Tobacco Report Due Soon

Late estimates of American Tobacco's annual report, to be made public early next week, indicate share earnings well in excess of $9, against $8.56 actually shown for 1930. This would provide more than ample coverage for the dividends paid in 1931, amounting to $6 a share on the common and common "B" stocks. The indicated showing is considered highly satisfactory, especially in the light of official government statistics of declining cigarette consumption owing to taxation rumors during the latter months of the year.

Rolling Mills Buying Noted

Without any desire to attract attention, there is persistent demand for American Rolling Mills. This buying is leisurely and purely of long-term character. Slow operations in the automobile field are hardly conducive to immediate profit expansion for Rolling Mills.

Mack Trucks for Long Pull

Mack Trucks is favored for the long pull in some quarters on the theory that the company is in a sound financial condition, as indicated by the declaration of the regular dividend a day or two ago, and could enjoy a rapid expansion in earnings when general business revives.

Mack was one of the speculative favorites several years ago. The stock is believed to have been thoroughly liquidated and any effort to accumulate a large long position would be reflected in higher prices.

New Building in New England Is Larger

New building in New England continues to increase, according to figures just issued by F. W. Dodge Corp. Contracts awarded in the week ended March 8 totaled $2,548,800, comparing with a weekly average for the year to date of $1,841,900. In the previous year the total was $1,980,900.

Prior to this there had been a succession of weekly rises. The Jan. 28 weekly total was $1,015,700; Feb. 2, $1,336,100; Feb. 9, $1,528,300; Feb. 16, $1,672,700; Feb. 23, $2,158,400.

New Building Plans Are Given

Following is a list of some of the larger projects now being figured which have not been previously mentioned, according to Brown's Letters, Inc., construction reports, who have plans and specifications on file in their office:

Androscoggin Bank alterations, Lewiston, Me; architect, Thomas M. James Company, Boston. Public Latin School for Boys, addition and alterations, Boston; architect, McLaughlin & Burr, Boston. Administration and clinical building for Veterans' Hospital, Rutland; private plans.

Shoe Production Is Larger

Shoe & Leather Reporter says shoe production was reported at considerably higher levels during the past week. Practically all sections noted an improvement during this period. Women's sections particularly were reported as operating at increased levels and in a few instances declared overtime schedules in effect.

Independent Utility Planned

Wall St. hears an independent Federal Water Service Corporation, controlled by President Christopher T. Chenery and associates, and free from all financial ties with other public utility interests, will emerge soon as result of negotiations nearing completion. Central Hanover Bank & Trust Company acquired 342,435 shares of Class "B" voting stock of Federal Water Service and Chase National Bank acquired remaining 200,015 voting shares as result of receivership of Tri-Utilities Corporation, which had placed Federal Water Service "B" stock with banks as collateral for loans.

World Wheat Acreage Unchanged

Washington, March 12—No marked change is shown in winter sowings of wheat to date in leading producing countries as compared with a year ago, according to Department of Agriculture. In 15 countries now reporting, winter wheat acreage for harvest in 1932 is estimated at 138,551,000 acres, against 142,272,000 acres in 1931.

Sugar Hearing April 12

Washington, March 12—A hearing on refined sugar, as part of its investigation with respect to sugar, will be held by United States Tariff Commission on April 12, commission states. Action looking to hearing with respect to raw sugar and related articles and molasses also covered by the inquiry has been deferred for present.

Telephone Earnings Estimated

Present indication is that the earnings statement of American Telephone & Telegraph Company for the first quarter of 1932 will show, as was the case in the last two quarters of 1931, income slightly less than at the rate of the $9 dividend requirement. Company had $289,000,000 in cash assets on hand December 31 last, equal to about $16 a share on 18,658,000 shares outstanding at end of year.

S. O. of Ohio Reduces "Gas" Price

Cleveland, March 12—Standard Oil Company of Ohio has lowered price of gasoline in Ashtabula County and towns of Doylestown and Rittman two cents a gallon below State-wide level.

Plan to Sell German Interests

Hartford, March 12—Rodney Hitt, vice-president of Rossia Insurance Company, recently returned from Germany, states that Rossia International's interest in German companies may be sold "if right bid and right party are found."

MAY MEAN CHANGE

I. A., Boston—What is your advice on buying United States Pipe & Foundry? How long have dividends been paid?

Ans.—The current $2 annual dividend has been maintained on United States Pipe & Foundry since issuance of present stock in fourth quarter of 1928. It was covered in 1930 by earnings of $3.42 a share, a gain of 12 per cent over 1929 net of $2.74. In the six months ended June 30, 1931, earnings were 92 cents a share, against $1.76 in similar period of 1930. A yield of more than 12 per cent, at recent levels, may be an indication of downward adjustment in the dividend rate.

SPECTATOR

Says:

The market so far continues to show scale down support, but no aggressive effort to hold the list is discernible. This suggests further irregularity, but the belief is that an effort to put up stocks will be made in the next few days from around current levels. They're worth watching.

That 90 Level

One smart market student believes that if the 90 level on the averages is broken through, the market might have quite a ride from there . . . His theory is that there was quite a bit of short selling around the tops of the present move with stop loss orders placed around the 92 level. If the market gets enough momentum to go through 90, he reasons, it will catch these stops and run up at least several points more . . .

Announcement of the copper agreement came as a relief to Wall Street. Those in the know declare that the most dangerous phase of the situation has passed.

Here and There

Part of the old Auburn crowd is understood to be running Case Threshing with the aim of punishing an overcrowded short interest. The stock had an interesting tape action yesterday, as if someone were caught . . . The tractions continue well bought on recessions . . . The dividend omission hasn't affected International Telephone much . . . Big blocks which have been coming out in some of the oils are understood to be cross sales for a large estate. Rockefeller brokers were the buyers.

Financial Market News, Stocks, Bonds, Commodities and Comment

STATE ST.
Hears:

That the failure of the rails to come forward and lead the stock list into higher ground resulted in prices slipping sufficiently to touch off the protecting stops recommended. The trader went home with a clean slate. There is no reason for bearishness, as the present move is undoubtedly a delayed reaction to the 78 level looked for ten days ago.

Market Outlook

The present status of share prices is one which cannot be judged by past rules. Ordinarily it would be the proper thing to definitely say a rally of some proportions would be seen on Monday. Because the short interest is now cramped by new regulations it is most difficult to gauge the condition of the list. It appears oversold and a rally should be seen on Monday. But the difficulty involved in estimating the extent of the short interest frankly forces the trader onto a day basis while reactionary influences rule.

Aside from the short interest, the volume and number of issues traded are indicative of a near term upswing. Since Monday, when 627 issues were traded, the volume and total issues traded have steadily fallen.

Boardroom Briefs

Private dispatches from Detroit indicate the motors can be avoided until further notice...The accessory shares, such as Electric Auto-Lite, which have been mentioned here are no longer recommended and their sale is warranted by all but the very long term trader... General Motors, Graham Paige, Chrysler and the other motors spoken of here can be viewed in the same light ..

Even though the rails have proved disappointing, it is the most likely section to lead any upswing that gets under way next week . . . Those who find the slow pace and difficulty in creating profits turning them to the bear side should remember the precedent which indicates a real bull market gets under way slowly The chemicals are getting down within reach of their original buying range . . .

Macy

Estimated per share earnings for 1931 are $3.50 for Macy This supplies a margin of 50 cents per share over the present common dividend It is thought the rate will be retained Its stock has consistently sold to return a lower yield than the majority of listed shares This has been due in part at least to the payment of a 5 per cent stock dividend in each of the last 4 years.

It is not considered improbable that the stock dividend will be done away with at the meeting next Wednesday. If this does happen it should present an opportunity to pick up this leading merchandise equity at a price which yields an attractive return on the cash dividend alone. Since it has closed at the daily low in recent sessions this possibility is heightened in the opinion of astute tape readers. It will yield 6 per cent on the $3 rate at 50.

Mavis Co. Proposes Capital Changes

Mavis Bottling Co. of America has called two special meetings for March 31 to vote on revaluation of the assets of the company at current prices, a reduction of the stated value of the capital to $345,269 on the basis of $1 for each share now outstanding and a reduction of par value of present class A common stock to $1 a share from $5.

It is proposed that the balance of present capital be transferred to surplus account and against it be charged the losses from previous operations and all items of depreciation used in the proposed revaluation of the assets.

Directors also recommend the number of authorized shares be increased to 1,000,000 shares from 500,000 so that additional shares shall be available if required for financing future operations of the business.

Carr-Fastener Has Increase in Profit

United Carr Fastener Corp. of [illegible] and subsidiaries report for year to Dec. 31, 1931 net profit of $[illegible]4,876 after all charges or 37 cents per share on the 250,000 no-par shares outstanding. These earnings compare with 27 cents per share in 1930, $2.27 in 1929, $2.46 in 1928 and 79 cents in 1927.

Current assets of United Carr Fastener as of Dec. 31, 1931, amounted to $1,450,908 and current liabilities $181,635, against $1,591,997 and $153,423, respectively, on Dec 31, 1930.

Texas Pacific Rail Assets $8,276,259

Texas & Pacific Railroad reports to the Interstate Commerce Commission current assets $8,276,259 on Jan. 31 last, against $13,357,627 a year ago. Current liabilities were $3,615,[illegible] compared with $4,130,465.

Investments in stocks and bonds etc., other than those of affiliated companies were given as $103,891 compared with $86,375 and funded debt maturing within six months was $562,000 against a like sum in the preceding year.

FIGHTING FOR A FORTUNE

In the Land of the Mayas

Exciting Tale of— —Hidden Treasure

STARTING NEXT SUNDAY!

YOU'LL be as surprised as "Red" Geary by the attack on him in a small Yucatan town in which he had just arrived. There seemed to be no reason for the assault

But "Red" didn't know of the man posing as "'Red' Geary" who sought buried treasure in a manner that the real "Red" would never follow. And he soon heard of the buried fortune the impostor sought—a fortune in gold, hidden, centuries before, by the Mayas. He also learned that the ancient Mayas had not intended to have their gold buried forever. They meant it to so well, when attacked by the Spaniards, that now—after four-hundred years—the fabulous treasure's hiding place was still a secret

The real "Red," of course, helps solve the puzzle and clear his name. How he does it, as told in "The Golden Snail," by Herbert Jensen, is a series of thrills from start to finish. See next Sunday's American Weekly for opening chapters of this tale of tropical adventure.

Crisp told the House that the ways and means committee would meet next week to consider amendments to the manufacturers tax feature which raises [illegible] of the $1,096,000,000 in the b[illegible]

If the salestax fails [illegible] the committee will present substitute taxes.

He defended the manufacturers tax as "the most equitable [illegible] fairest way of raising the money."

Rep. La[illegible] (R) of New York, presented a sales tax substitute of the progressive bloc.

The substitutes will [illegible] 000,000 as compared to $[illegible] provided by the sales tax. The substitutes include higher taxes on automobiles, sales tax on [illegible] phonographs, cosmetics, luxuries, increase in income tax, stamp taxes on checks, contracts, receipts and stock transfers.

WARNING BY RAINEY

Congress must either accept the proposed sales tax or miscellaneous taxes suggested by the Treasury which are far more obnoxious will be imposed, Rep. Rainey, Democratic leader of the House said.

The manufacturers tax, Rainey said apparently will be defeated in the House unless there is a change of opinion within the next few days.

BECK PRAISES SALES TAX

Our country cannot exist long with the unequal power of tax appropriation in the Senate unless this power is used with more moderation, according to Congressman James M. Beck of Pennsylvania, speaking at the annual banquet of the Real Estate Exchange in the Copley-Plaza Hotel.

"The fact that 16 Western states with a population less than Pennsylvania, have 32 senators," he said, "proves that the East is helpless in the upper House of Congress when appropriations are made for the farmer and Mississippi floods, which no human can hope to control.

"Idaho contributed to the Federal Treasury $886,000 in 1931 and drew out $1,315,000. Wyoming paid $752,000 and took back $3,107,000 in appropriations.

"On the other hand New York gave the federal government $928,000,000 and drew out $8,000,000," said the speaker, charging that it was a "travesty on democracy" on the part of the Senate.

Beck championed the general sales tax now on the floor of the national House.

3 BANKING BILLS UP NEXT WEEK

Washington, March 12 (AP). Intensive inquiry [illegible] restoratives for banking and money conditions will be started in three directions next week by the House banking committee.

President Hoover's home loan bank bill, the Steagall plan for guaranteeing Federal Reserve Bank deposits and proposals for stabilizing the dollar will provide the basis of the committee's program.

Chairman Steagall and ranking members of his committee personally assured the President [illegible] of the early consideration of his home-loan bill. Rep. [illegible] (D., Wis.) will head the sub-committee on this measure.

Steagall himself will [illegible] ings on his guarantee [illegible] Goldsborough (D., M[illegible] duct the inquiry into [illegible] for stabilizing the purchasing value of the dollar.

The first official I met was Atty. Gen. Joseph E. Warner who was going over legal documents when I stepped into his office. He watches law breakers and sends them to jail.

Then I came to an office marked "State Treasurer." I thought this fellow must have a lot of money pass through his hands. So I walked in and took a "shot" at Charles F. Hurley, the state treasurer. He's a great fellow.

An office marked "State Auditor" was my next stop. I was delighted to greet Francis X. Hurley. He told me that the fellow I "shot" in the treasurer's office was his cousin, Charles.

And then I took a stroll to see what they do at these legislative sessions. As I entered the chamber, I met Representative Thomas F. Carroll of Revere, who was looking up some data on a question of law. These law makers are a great "Gang."

NARDINI, TRACK STAR, SECRETLY DIVORCED

Concord, N. H., March 12—Frank G. Nardini, former Dartmouth College track star, has been quietly divorced by Louise G. Nardini, it was learned today.

At the same time Nardini still plays host to his family in his North Main st. restaurant.

Daily Mrs. Nardini, accompanied by her two children, Eleanor, 16 and Frank, 13, enter the restaurant and eat their meals.

Under the terms of an unusual agreement entered into by the Nardinis Mrs. Nardini her son and daughter may eat in Nardini's restaurant to the amount of $10 weekly.

Should food of such a value not be eaten by them the balance may be taken out in groceries.

The divorce was obtained in Merrimack county superior court and granted by Judge Oscar L. Young several weeks ago on charges of [illegible]

Under the agreement, Nardini promised to pay his wife $35 weekly, maintain a 20,000 life insurance policy with his wife as sole beneficiary and permit his wife to have custody of the two children. However reasonable visits were permitted to Nardini.

Mrs. Nardini testified, it was learned today that her husband nagged her, stayed out late nights and told her he didn't love her.

Mrs. Nardini further told the court that the restaurant proprietor maintained towards her an attitude of indifference. She said that on Feb. 3, 1931, he struck her and knocked her down in the hall way of their Concord home.

The couple were married following a rapid-fire courtship when both were students. Mrs. Nardini, who before her marriage was a "belle" in Waterville, Me., where her husband attended Colby College for a time, was married to the former track star, in Lowell, Mass. on June 2, 1915.

ADAMS SCORES MILK CONTROL

Declaring that proposed milk legislation places absolute power over dealers and prices in the hands of the state department of agriculture, Charles F. Adams, treasurer of First National Stores, today propounded three questions to Commissioner Gilbert to clarify the situation.

Adams asks:

"Can a dairy farmer, whose milk has received approval of the health department of Boston, Brookline or other Massachusetts city or town, sell his product under the proposed law without having also secured a certificate from the state department?"

"Is there in the proposed legislation any provision that requires the department to issue such an official certificate?"

"Is it possible under the proposed legislation for the department to neglect or refuse to inspect dairies and issue certificates to farmers who have received local approval?"

Adams also wrote:

"In my opinion, the power granted under the proposed legislation could be so wielded that a producer could be forced to sell his milk for 1 cent per quart, if he sold it at all, and, on the other hand, because of your official control of supply, the consumer could be obliged to pay 50 cents a quart."

Drunken Driver Is Sent to Reformatory

Michael C. Green, 21, of Billerica st., West End, was sent to Concord Reformatory by Chief Justice Bolster in municipal court today, for drunken driving.

A car which Green was driving hit a taxi cab at Boylston and Tremont sts., March 4, tipping the taxi cab over. Police claim Green fled on foot.

Power Trust Fails Hoover After He Praises It

By M. E. RAMSAY
Universal Service

Washington, March 12 — Four months after the federal trade commission began its earlier power trust investigation—partly nullified by a [illegible] power trust [illegible] ification as well as by scant funds—Herbert Hoover [illegible] the power industry with [illegible] kets."

Mr. Hoover, then secretary of commerce, made this and other [illegible] declarations in a keynote address to the National Electric Light Association, the "mouthpiece" of the companies under investigation.

His address was exploited by the industry not only through ordinary news and publicity channels but by a special distribution of 50,000 copies of the [illegible] association. The copies were obtained from the Department of Commerce.

[illegible] records relating to this exploitation found their way into the present investigation, this far more amply supported, but threatened with sharp curtailment by a cut in appropriations.

The first investigation had been initiated by Senator Norris of Nebraska, veteran Progressive leader, in an attempt to expose the mighty but mysterious forces blocking government operation of Muscle Shoals. Facing defeat by a pre-arranged filibuster, Norris had sat in the Senate for days watching former Senator Ernst of Kentucky.

When Ernst at last introduced a strongly backed resolution to investigate an alleged tobacco monopoly, Norris tacked his resolution on behind. The Senate approved his amendment and the Trade Commission set to work, with little money and few trained investigators.

Mr. Hoover, when he spoke four months later, said his own department had made a study of the effectiveness of state regulation. He continued:

"It is my belief from this investigation that the public service commission with very little just criticism are proving themselves fully adequate to control the situation."

Charleston, W. Va., March 12 (INS)—Gov. William H. "Alfalfa Bill" Murray of Oklahoma, today entered himself as a candidate for the Democratic nomination for President in the West Virginia primaries.

10 Silver-Mounted Guns for Alimony

Chicago, March 12 (AP)—Mrs. Martha Pugh went hunting for alimony yesterday but what she got was guns, 10 of them to be exact, all silver trimmed.

In court yesterday, she accused her husband, Jesse, a milk man, of being behind in his alimony payments. Jesse admitted he had a small arsenal.

"That being the case," said Judge Trude, "just give your wife 10 of the guns and call the debt squared."

New Envelopes to Be Tinted for Seasons

Chicago, March 12 (AP)—Brighter days may be ahead for the mailman.

The National Envelope Manufacturers' Association has revealed that it proposes to tint envelopes in pastel shades.

George Gaw, official city greeter and a member of the organization, suggested colors in keeping with the season, brown for autumn and rosy hues for spring.

What'll Thieves Do With This Property?

Chicago, March 12 (AP)—A nice problem of merchandising confronted the five bandits who hijacked a truck near Joliet today.

They got:

A motor truck of the Pioneer Cartage Company, Decatur.

Sixty cases of fly swatters.

Fifty pounds of butter.

Sixteen boxes of plumbing fixtures.

They abandoned the truck in Hammond, Ind.

Powers Can Hear His Gallows Being Built

Moundsville, W. Va., March 12 (INS)—Harry F. Powers, convicted "Bluebeard" slayer, was moved to the hanging room "annex" of the West Virginia penitentiary today to await his end for the murder of Mrs. Dorothy Pressler Lemke, Northboro divorcee.

Powers' cell is located close to the gallows—so close, prison guards said, that the slayer will be able to hear attendants making preparations for his hanging next Friday.

This Family Tangle Is All Very Simple!

Richmond, Va., March 12 (AP)—Consanguinity can be complicated. John W. Glass saw his grandfather and grandmother married, thrice watched his father married and his sister and daughter are sisters-in-law. But its simple:

His mother's mother and father's father married when widowed, his father married four times and his daughter and sister married brothers.

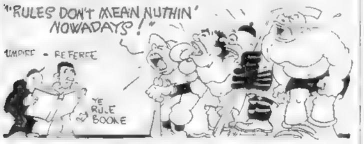
Obeying Any Law Terribly Old Fashioned

Hockey referees and wrestling officials are getting it going and coming these days. Baseball is around the bend and they better start equipping the umps with trench helmets and bullet proof vests. Some of us always were prone to yell "Kill the Umpire." But only in the spirit of fun. Today everybody's yelling it and means it. It's in keeping with the spirit of the times. My, how we Americans have NOT come to love and respect law and order, since prohibition turned the reins of government over to the Invisible Empire! As a last resort in trailing the stealers of the Little Eaglet they turn to Capone. Al Capone, bigger than the Department of Justice, bigger than all the detective bureaus and police forces of the land! Shucks! And to think what a kick some of the naughty boys used to get out of reading Jesse James and Diamond Dick! The irony of it all would be laughable if it wasn't so almighty serious.

If nothing else, recent developments give the underworld open and not secret control. Hasn't been so secret at that. A couple of years ago we had an appointment with a political leader of a certain Eastern State. As we approached his door, out of it came the governor of the state arm in arm—with Al Capone! The same Al Capone we saw come over from Red Hook to take a job in the delivery department of a metropolitan newspaper. Later to rule the underworld from his throne in Chicago as Czar of Gangdom. By the way, wasn't that a "strange coincidence," the Chicago paper printing the rumor of the Lindbergh kidnaping the Monday before the deed was done? That night the rumor was denied over the air. But the next day the child was stolen!



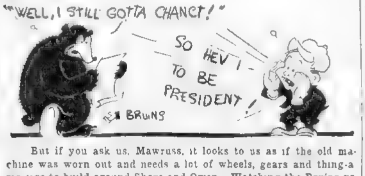
"RULES DON'T MEAN NUTHIN' NOWADAYS!"
UMPIRE - REFEREE
YE RULE BOOKE

Giving Capone a chance to save the Little Eaglet? Why not? The end would justify the means. If that little curly-haired baby—if ANY little, lost child—can be restored to the arms of its mother, let it be done, even if all the jails in the land have to be opened to do it. Events more and more, show the country to be under control of the Invisible Empire. The more open it becomes the quicker the inevitable earthquake will come that will shake the little old U. S. A. back to normal. On with the dance! In the meantime we sporting fans can keep on making life miserable for referees and umpires. Rules? Away with them! They're terribly old fashioned. They're not in keeping with the times.

Our Braves get their 1932 baptism of fire in an exhibition game against the Yankees in old St Pete this afternoon. Looks as if it was going to be against the Ruthless Yanks. Latest reports are the Babe, who hasn't yet come to terms with the club, is going to sulk in his tent and await tomorrow's arrival of Col. Ruppert. Signs along the trail are the Yankee owner and the Yankee star will reach an agreement. The Braves will play the Yankees again tomorrow. Other Braves-Yanks games are billed for next Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday. The Braves tackle the Athletics on Friday and Saturday and resume play with the Yankees one week from tomorrow and on the following two days.

While the Braves are whetting their playing edge against the Yankees and Athletics, our Red Sox will be confining their efforts to practice games among themselves. The Boston Americans do not meet a rival outfit until Monday, March 28, just before Shono Collins leads the team North. The Red Sox open a three-game series with the Newark Internationals at Savannah on Monday, March 28 and play their first major league exhibition game against the Cincinnati Reds on Thursday, March 31. They start the swing North the next day and play Norfolk in Norfolk on April 2. Before arriving home for a game with the Braves here on April 9, the Sox will play a series in Jersey with Newark and Jersey City.

While there's life there is hope, and there may be life in the Old Bruins yet. But the chances of their getting in the playoffs now wouldn't bring much in the open market. Some of the boys think the Bruins chances are about the same as little Willie's for the presidency. But the fact remains that a couple of years ago Les Canadiens looked almost as hopeless as the Bruins do now, but the Flying Frenchmen edged into the playoffs and came out with the Stanley Cup. So "Faugh a ballagh!" Bruins, as they say in the Scandinavian. Up and at 'em!



"WELL, I STILL GOTTA CHANCT!"
SO HEV I TO BE PRESIDENT!
BRUINS

But if you ask us, Mawruss, it looks to us as if the old machine was worn out and needs a lot of wheels, gears and thing-a-ma-jigs to build around Shore and Owen. Watching the Bruins vs. Black Hawks, the other night, we were plumb disgusted. Cooney Weiland might just as well have been off the ice, it seemed to us. Twice we saw Shore make a perfect pass to the goal mouth and Barry "flunk" the shot. The Chicago lines skated rings around our boys. Before next year rolls around, Art Ross certainly will have to do some tall scrambling with the Bruins' front line.

Pipe all hands on deck! Here's Phil Schlossberg, manager of Arturo DeKuh and erstwhile pilot and mate of the Good Ship Ernie Schaaf. Phil objects to having anyone refer to Ernie as being his meal ticket. "I was the meal ticket!" declares Phil. CRUCIAL TILTS IN ICE LEAGUE

New York, March 12 (AP)—Two places in the National Hockey League standing, both of them fairly certain now, can be settled beyond mathematical doubt in the week-end games.

The Montreal Maroons, six points ahead of the New York Americans as they near the end of the race for third place in the Canadian division, can clinch their playoff place tomorrow night if they beat the New York Rangers and the determined Detroit Falcons whip the Americans.

The Rangers can complete their capture of first place in the American group by turning back the Maroons, or they can let the Montreal Canadiens settle it for them tonight by beating or tying the Chicago Black Hawks.

The other game on the week-end program involves a couple of the many doubtful places in the standings. In it, the Boston Bruins and Toronto Maple Leafs resume a rivalry that has brought several exciting games and a one-game edge for the Leafs in four clashes.

SHIELDS WINS FIRST MATCH

New York, March 12 (AP)—Frank Shields, America's No. 3 tennis star, led the parade of seded players into the second round of the national indoor tournament at the Seventh Regiment Armory today with a 6-4, 6-4 victory over Simon Miller, New York southpaw.

Shields one of the tournament favorites, took it easy all the way and for the most part let Miller beat himself.

Another seeded player, Gregory Mangin of Newark, followed Shields into the second round by beating Martin Alexander of Brooklyn 6—1, 6—0.

Enters Monastery

Jimmy Carlton, the Australian, who recently equalled the world's 100 meter record, has quit the track to enter a monastery and will not be a member of the Australian team which will come to America next summer for the Olympic games. Carlton was a member of the 1928 Olympic team and was counted upon to score for Australia at Los Angeles.

Carroll Accuses Jack Kearns of Trickery

Local boxing fans rubbed their eyes on reading this morning that Mickey Walker knocked out Jim Maloney, Boston boxer, in the second round of a scheduled 10-round bout at Salt Lake City, Utah, last night.

They rubbed their eyes again [illegible] and then sent [illegible] of phone calls to Dan Carroll, Maloney's manager.

[illegible] Dan Carroll [illegible]

[illegible]

"I was talking to Jimmy Maloney on the phone at midnight last night, and Jim was home in Miami, Fla. How could he be in Salt Lake City at 10 o'clock? Jim is a good fellow, but I never knew he was an angel, and only an angel could fly from Miami to Salt Lake City and back in a couple of hours.

Kearns Put Over One on Reporters

[illegible] point and informed that a mistake had been made, and that it was a "Jim Mahoney," a Boston boxer, who was snuffed out by Walker.

"That shows you," said Dan. "Jack Kearns put one over on the reporters, and wanted them to think that it was Jimmy Maloney who was knocked out.

"And, furthermore, there is no Jimmy Mahoney in Boston who is a heavyweight contender. The only Jimmy Mahoney I ever heard of is a Chicago Greek. And he is so lousy that even the fans in Chicago never heard of him.

Maloney Ready to Fight Walker at Any Time

"Jack Kearns may be smart, but if he really wants Walker, his meal ticket, punched so full of holes that he won't be worth a stale bun, let him sign Walker for a bout with Maloney.

"And the bout won't be held in any tank town, either. When Maloney meets Walker he wants the bout for either Chicago, New York, or some place where Kearns won't be able to do any tricks in spelling.

"Maloney can take care of Walker and I can take care of Kearns. And you can tell Kearns I don't use perfume."

HENIGAN IN 20 MILE GRIND

Jimmy Henigan and Clarence H De Mar, renew their Marathon feud in the first annual Mystic Valley Marathon championship race over the 20-mile route this afternoon at 2:30. The race is under the auspices of the North Medford Club.

Smiling Jimmy will lead a flock of 100 other entries away on the grind.

Henigan has not appeared this road race season, as he has been saving his strength for the Boston Marathon.

Besides the entries of these two leading stars, the list includes many other leading long distance runners, including such from the North Medford Club as Paul Casano, John Kelly, Tom Smith, Phil Collins, F. McCune, E. Macklin, F. Scanlon and F. Hooten.

80 Crimson Frosh Assigned to Shells

Eighty Harvard freshmen have been taken from the drills in the barge and assigned to seating in 10 shells.

The recent freezing of the river prevents the newly-chosen men from starting at once. As soon as the ice breaks up Bill Haines will put his men to work.

Yarns From Red Hose

Savannah, Ga., March 12—Pete Donahue's 81 is the best mark turned in by any of the golfers on the Red Sox [illegible] the municipal links. Danny MacFayden has been credited with an 88.

Shono Collins' methods of training [illegible] the [illegible] sanest of all by many baseball authorities. He has one workout a day and that without any calisthenics, grass drills, hurdling or tossing of the medicine ball. The Collins clan gets in shape by playing baseball.

The Hub Hose chief is opposed to two drills a day because he doesn't think it helps an athlete to go out and work hard in the morning, eat a baseball player's lunch (which is a carload of groceries) and then return in the afternoon to put on a wet suit for a second session.

Walter Dashiell, second base recruit, owns and operates a commercial radio station at Pensacola, Florida, and is in a fair way to make himself a big part of the broadcasting business.

A [illegible] battle for the first base job on the Sox nine is due to get started any moment with Al Van Camp and Jack Rothrock as the [illegible] Van Camp [illegible] [illegible] of the batterymen and has a big lead in the speedy [illegible]

A message for the Great Art Shires was sent to the Red Sox encampment. Evidently there is someone around who doesn't know as much about Shires as the latter would like to believe.

Gibbons' Son Wins Family First Title

Minneapolis, March 12 (AP)—With his father, Mike Gibbons, the [illegible] second, Jack Gibbons of St Paul has climbed a rung up the ladder of boxing fame.

Jack won the middleweight championship of the Northwest's annual Golden Gloves tournament which ended last night. He polished off Del Styers, Minneapolis, in three rounds, using a damaging right and a fast left.

In doing that, Jack accomplished something his father never had been able to do despite his greatness in the ring—win a championship.

Horseman Dies

Louisville, Ky., March 11 (AP)—R. H. Lillard, of Lawrenceburg, Ky. died in a hotel lobby here tonight after a heart attack. He was secretary of the American Saddle Horse Breeders Association.

[illegible] STAFF IS STRONGEST IN YEARS

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 12 (AP)—Even if the best [illegible] may hope for is a fourth or [illegible] place this year, the [illegible] Braves will go back on the war path with a faster, stronger club.

The power of their pitching staff [illegible] to make it extremely [illegible] of the National League [illegible]

[illegible]

With [illegible] Mickey Cochrane or [illegible] on the receiving end [illegible] able to turn back [illegible] of time for the [illegible] Hank Gowdy now [illegible] the Braves would be sure [illegible] contenders.

The [illegible] staff now consists of Al Spohrer, former knockout [illegible] and [illegible] roommate of Art Shires, and Bob Hargrave, veteran [illegible] Baltimore [illegible] receiver. Hargrave [illegible] but what McKechnie [illegible] combination [illegible] of each.

The [illegible] prospect is John Bolton [illegible] Binghampton, N. Y., and [illegible] experiment of trying [illegible] outfielder behind the bat has not appeared to solve the problem.

"Whether or not we can bolster the catching," McKechnie declared, "we should have a better club, faster and with more real punch. If everything looked as rosy as my pitching staff I wouldn't have a thing to worry about."

Brandt One of Best Southpaws in League

McKechnie has one of the best southpaws in the league in Ed Brandt, who won 18 and lost 11 with a [illegible] club in 1931. He [illegible] one southpaw in [illegible] Tom Zachary. [illegible] Walter [illegible] and [illegible] seasoned right-handers [illegible] Bruce Cunningham [illegible] and Harry [illegible]

The [illegible] additions to the hurling corps are Leo Mangum, who pitched good ball for the Newark Bears last year, and Walter Betts, who won 22 games for the championship St. Paul club of the American Association. Both are right handers. McKechnie plans to keep 10 pitchers.

New Faces in the Braves Infield

The Braves' infield will show at least two new figures, Fritz Knothe at third and Art Shires at first and probably a third, Bill Akers, at second base. McKechnie has been working these players with Bill Urbanski at shortstop as his first string combination. It packs a batting wallop besides looking good on the defense.

Knothe, purchased from Seattle, is expected [illegible] a longstanding weak spot. Shires was bought from Milwaukee on the theory he will behave himself [illegible] cracking to interfere with his usefulness. He shows every indication of [illegible] handsome..

Akers was discarded as a shortstop by Detroit, drafted by the Braves from Kansas City and apparently has satisfied McKechnie he can produce. In reserve there is Rabbit Maranville, 39 years [illegible] but still aggressive, and Bill Walters, 21, and a rising star.

Wally Berger, the rangy slugger who came up two years ago from the Pacific Coast League, furnishes the big punch of the outfield. McKechnie will be much disappointed if Wes Schulmerich and Red Worthington fail to deliver more base hits than they did in 1931.

Both have [illegible] better in camp than they did a year ago. Meanwhile Oscar F. Knorr [illegible] a fast slugger who hit [illegible] last year for the San Francisco Missions, is being given every chance to develop.

Metropolitan Ski Jump Transferred

Pittsfield, Mass., March 12 (AP)—The Metropolitan ski jumping tournament scheduled for tomorrow afternoon at West Lebanon, N. Y., by the Norway Ski Club of New York has been transferred to Salisbury Mills, N. Y., where it will be held Monday with the co-operation of the [illegible] Ski Club.

Snow will be transported to Salisbury Mills from a point 30 miles away in order that the meet may be held.

Alleged Slayer of Ed Morris to Go on Trial March 21

Brewton, Ala., March 12—Joe White, who has been indicted on a second degree murder charge in connection with the slaying of Ed Morris, Boston Red Sox pitcher, will be tried on March 21. Minimum sentence on a conviction is a 10 years' jail term.

Morris died on March 7, three days after being stabbed, allegedly at a fish fry held in honor of the pitcher on the eve of his departure for the Red Sox training camp.

U. S. ATHLETES STAR IN CAMBRIDGE VICTORY

AMERICANS HELP DOWN OXFORD

London, March 12 (AP)—Cambridge University today defeated Oxford in their 64th annual track and field meet.

It was the seventh straight victory for the light blues and the 33d in the 64 meetings.

Two American athletes, V. Munroe, of Harvard, and W. D. Behnker, of Yale aided Cambridge in its victory, the former winning the quarter mile run and the latter the pole vault.

J. W. Fellowes, former [illegible] of the University of Wisconsin, won the three-mile run for Oxford in one of the most thrilling finishes of the afternoon. He defeated E. W. Denison, of Cambridge, by a step. Denison won the event last year against Oxford and also in the combined meet between Oxford-Cambridge and Harvard-Yale.

J. D. Wade, of Cambridge, won the first event on the program, the 100-yard dash, to get the light blue away to a flying start.

Two Oxford runners, J. P. Scott of Wyoming, an American, and H. B. St. L. Carter, were second and third respectively. Only first places count, however. The time was 10.1 seconds.

Cambridge also won the 120-yard high hurdles, J. St. L. Thornton, running to victory in 14.9 seconds. C. A. Lee Steere, of Oxford, was second, and I. S. Ivanovic of Cambridge, third.

Former Princeton Star Beaten in Shot-Put

E. G. Perry Cambridge shot-putter, made it three straight for the light blues when he won the 16-lb. event with a heave of 41 feet 10¾ inches, to defeat J. Byles of Oxford, a former Princeton student. Byles did 41 feet 4½ inches. A. L. Martin of Cambridge was third with a heave of 38 feet 8⅛ inches.

J. W. Fellowes of Oxford, Rhodes scholar from Wisconsin, gave the dark blue its first victory in the three-mile run, which he won in 14 minutes 50 4-5 seconds. E. W. Denison of Cambridge was second and C. J. Mabey of Oxford third. Fellowes won by the narrow margin of two yards.

Cambridge continued its sweep in the 220-yard low hurdles as Tornton raced to victory in 26.3 seconds for his second victory of the meet. G. A. McLean of Oxford was second and R. K. Brown of Cambridge third.

Ex-Harvard Runner Wins Quarter-Mile

L. F. York of Oxford won the high jump with a leap of 5 feet 10 inches, but V. Monroe of Cambridge, former Harvard athlete, made the score five first places to two for the Light Blue as he won the quarter mile in 51 1-5 seconds.

W. D. Fielding, of Cambridge, was second to York in the high jump and C. Lowry, of Oxford, and G. S. Defreit, of Cambridge, tied for third. L. L. Land, of Oxford, was second to Monroe and C. A. Emerson, of Cambridge, third.

W. D. Behnker, of Cambridge, formerly of Yale, made victory sure for the light blue by winning the pole vault with a vault of 11 feet, 5½ inches. It gave Cambridge six first places of the 11 comprising the meet. J. J. D. Groves, of Cambridge and R. B. Peacock and S. K. Kurtz, of Oxford, the latter also a former Yale student, tied for second place at 10 feet, 9 inches.

K. S. Duncan, of Oxford, won the running broad jump—called the "long jump" in England—but the dark blue cause was already lost. He lapped 22 feet, 2¼ inches to lead G. S. Churchill, of Cambridge, and A. Munro, of Cambridge, in that order.

J. F. Cornes and J. E. Lockelork of Oxford, ran a dead heat in the mile run to defeat J. E. Robins of Cambridge, in four minutes 22.5 seconds.

Mrs. S. G. Wellington Is Tennis Victor

Mrs. S. G. Wellington, with 23 games, was winner of the weekly lawn tennis tournament on the Clyde park covered courts at The Country Club.

Mrs. Edgar Wrightington was runner-up, with Mrs. Theodore Pitman one game behind for third place.

There was a tie for fourth place between Mrs. Isaac R. Edmands and Mrs. Charles Weston at 19 games. Mrs. D. R. Howe won 15 games, while Mrs. Randall Clifford and Mrs. O. W. Richardson took 13 games each.

Boston U. Fencers Tackle Boston "Y"

GUS, GEORGE IN FINISH FRAY

It took just 15 months for Paul Bowser to sign Gus Sonnenberg and Ed George, former world's heavyweight wrestling champion, for a finish mat battle in this city.

Bowser first started to try to arrange this contest after George lifted Sonny's title in Los Angeles a year ago last December. But he wasn't successful until the other day. The big show is set to go on at the Arena on next Thursday night.

Sonny and George have met twice since the Los Angeles affair, but neither match went to a finish. One contest was held in Toronto and was halted at 11 o'clock by a commission rule after each had scored a toss. The decision went to Gus. At Buffalo an 11 o'clock time limit also halted the tussle after each had won a fall. This mill was declared a draw.

In the contract for next Thursday night's bout, Bowser inserted this clause:

"Sonnenberg and George shall battle to a positive finish."

The bout will be contested under American Association rules which call for one fall to decide the victor in the event the match goes more than an hour. Otherwise it will be decided by best two falls out of three.

Fredericton spares — McArthur, Beaton, Gammon, Miller. Boston H. C. spares—Smith, Nelson, Culhane, Anderson, Morrissey, Kelley, Liddell, Thayer, Russell, McGregor.

Face-off at 8:15.

With one win apiece the final game of the International Club amateur hockey series is on at the Arena tonight when the Boston Hockey Club tackles the flashy Fredericton Millionaires.

Fredericton caught the locals in stride in the initial game and copped, 6-1, but the hockey club retaliated 8-6 in a free-scoring overtime game. The addition of Johnny Garrison and Caswell McGregor aided the hockey club's [illegible].

Ty Anderson and John Garrison, Olympic defense men, are [illegible] great hockey for Boston. Johnny Chase and Doug Palmer, two more Olympic aces, are also [illegible].

Moncton Champion Knocks Out Menko

Saint John, N. B., March 12 (AP)—"Kid" Hart of Moncton, N. B., Maritime featherweight champion, technically knocked out Frank Menko of Portland, Me., in a bout advertised for the Maritime featherweight title last night. Menko was unable to start the seventh round.

"Kid" Hambleton of Halifax, 134½, lost to George Venoit, Saint John, 136, by a technical knockout in the fourth round of a scheduled six round bout.

Worcester Women Win

Worcester, March 12—The Worcester Women's Swimming Association sank the Posse-Nissen school team of Boston, 32 to 18, in a meet in the Lincoln Square Boys' Club pool.

Touching All the Bases

New Orleans, March 12 (AP)—[illegible] are on [illegible] for next [illegible] camp [illegible] opened yesterday. [illegible]

[illegible] March 12 (AP)—The Washington Senators are going on in the [illegible] pennant race with a [illegible] batting [illegible] no need for opposing pitchers. [illegible] Manush [illegible] Cronin [illegible] one of the most feared batters in the league [illegible] batting [illegible] the American League with 350.

San Antonio, Tex., March 12 (AP)—A week of unseasonable weather has not helped the Chicago White Sox in their efforts to attain condition, but it has delayed the falling of the axe.

Manager Lew Fonseca had planned to send a half dozen recruits elsewhere along about Monday, but not having had sufficient opportunity to watch them in action, has decreed that they shall eat at the expense of the club until warmer weather reveals their shortcomings.

Bradenton, Fla., March 12 (AP)—Apparently unperturbed by the absence of Charles Gelbert, who is a St. Louis Cardinal holdout along with Chick Hafey, Manager Street is paying a great deal of attention to the work of grooming Eddie Delker to take Gelbert's place at shortstop.

Street says, however, that if Gelbert should show up he would have his old position back. Meanwhile Gelbert is at his home in Amber, Pa.

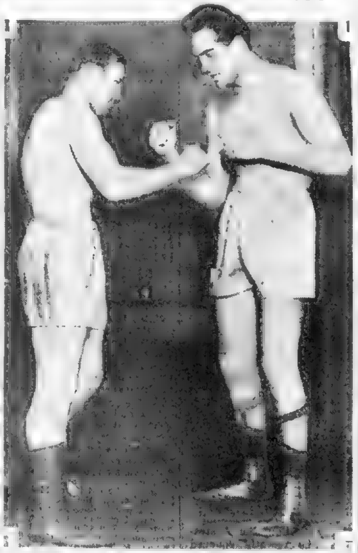
West Palm Beach, Fla., March 12 (AP)—Things are looking brighter for the St. Louis Browns now that "Goose" Goslin and Fred Schulte, star outfielders, are in spring training camp.

Following in the footsteps of Goslin, who signed Thursday, Schulte signed his contract and was in uniform yesterday.

Los Angeles, March 12 (AP)—Three games with the New York Giants have demonstrated that Cub pitchers rapidly are reaching form but there has been little to indicate that the batsmen are keeping up with the hurlers.

Lon Warneke and Bob Smith held the Giants to six hits yesterday as the Cubs won, 3 to 1. Weakness on the part of Roy Parmelee was as much responsible as Cub hitting. Rogers Hornsby's men got six hits, two of which were made by Billy Herman.

SOON WILL FIGHT



But not in the same ring. Once was enough—for DeKuh. JACK SHARKEY, left, is tuning up for his home and only ring appearance, at the Boston Garden next Friday, before his world's championship battle with Max Schmeling. Meets two opponents the same evening, a la Jack Dempsey. Eddie Malcolm of Minneapolis and Pedro Lopez of New York, will face the Sharkey wallops. At right you see the giant ARTHUR DeKUH, who faces Jack Dorval at the Arena next Monday. His manager, Phil Schlossberg, hopes to use the match as a stepping stone to a Schaaf-DeKuh encounter.

REVERE PLAYS GLOUCESTER

Danvers, March 12—Revere high and Gloucester high entered the final of the first North Shore interscholastic basketball tournament at the high school gym here. Revere beat Marblehead high 21 to 15, and Gloucester downed Peabody 33 to 19.

The teams will play the final game starting at 8 o'clock tonight, while Gloucester and Marblehead will play a consolation game immediately afterward.

The Beach City boys flashed in the third period. Sochat, Ed Pollitta and Jim McDonald scored on long tosses.

The Marblehead boys rallied in the last period and thrilled the gathering with their final drive.

B. C. Golfers Start Trip on March 23

The Boston College golf team will start on its annual spring trip March 23, the opening of the Easter holidays at the Heights. The Eagles have a five match schedule arranged with southern colleges opening with North Carolina on the Saturday after their arrival south.

They will meet Duke University, Villanova, George Washington University and William and Mary.

Five of the six players have already been selected, including Richard Nugent, Robert Barry, Mark Troy, Gerry Moore and Jerry Hern. The other member of the team will be named next week.

K. of C. Sports Night at Malden Monday

The Santa Maria Council, Knights of Columbus, of Malden will stage its annual athletic night, for the benefit of the welfare fund, at the Beebe Junior high school in that city on Monday night.

Speakers include William "Bill" Cunningham; Daniel Kelley, the new boxing commissioner; Danie Barry, former American League umpire; William "Bill" Ohrenberger, newly appointed coach of Boston English high school and George Owen, captain of the Bruins.

G. E. Eleven Plays Worcester Club

North Shore soccer fans will turn out for the clash at the General Electric Stadium tomorrow between the General Electric and Worcester Scandinavian elevens expecting to see the best game played in that vicinity for some time.

BATTALINO IS VICTOR OVER EDDIE RAN

New York, March 12 (AP)—Christopher (Bat) Battalino of Hartford, Ct., may turn out to be another Billy Petrolle—light enough to worry the lightweights and heavy enough to be dangerous to the welterweights.

Battalino went after bigger game in Madison Square Garden last night and proceeded to give Eddie Ran, the Polish welterweight, an artistic trouncing in 10 rounds.

Outweighed eight pounds the former featherweight champion took four rounds to find out what made Ran tick and then waded into him and won the unanimous decision of judges and the referee.

At 138 pounds Battalino looked to be in great shape. It should be no Herculean task for him to shave off three pounds and mix with the lightweights, nor difficult to build up to 140 when he has a welterweight to face.

The cagey Hartford battler never gave an opening for the Pole's vaunted right hand—the punch that has stretched Billy Townsend and other welters on the canvas.

Battalino kept his chin well protected until he came in close and then belted Ran's face and body with savage lefts and rights.

BOSTON PROS FACE RANGERS

The Boston pro soccer eleven meets the Pawtucket Rangers today at the Lonsdale ave. grounds, Pawtucket, and will return to the Hub after the game. The game scheduled with the New York Americans at New York tomorrow has been postponed.

The postponement makes today's game all the more interesting and the Blue and Gold eleven will give everything it has in an effort to bag both points.

The Rangers will provide strong opposition with Bob McIntyre, Jimmy McAuley, Ned Tate, Bob Fleming, Johnny Harvie and Tommy Scott all playing at the top of their game.

Manager Jimmy McDonald will field Bert Whalley in goal, Tommy Adams and Charlie O'Hare as fullback, Henry Burness, Walter Aspden and Jimmy Ewen at halfbacks and Tommy Ritchie, Willie Ballantyne, Blondy Gustafson, Gordon Burness and Murphy Nilsen, forwards.

The only other game scheduled is at Winchester where the Winchester Pals and the Quincy Rangers clash in a Bay State League game.

Mr. Boston

By JACK CONWAY

ARTHUR DeKUH, Italian heavyweight, will be in line for a big shot of dough if he can clip Nicholson Jack Dorval when they get tangled up in their ten-round bout at the Arena on Monday night. All because Phil Schlossberg, former manager of Ernie Schaaf, happens to be DeKuh's pilot.

Schlossberg has popped off and said that DeKuh can lick Schaaf. Maybe the wish is father to the thought. All managers who sell a boxer's contract like to dig up a fellow who can lick their former protege. They figure that if they can do this they prove they are wise birds.

Mr. Boston

You often hear managers saying they would like to see a boxer they formerly handled become a champion. They are merely kidding themselves when they make such remarks. Way down deep in their hearts they would like to see their former meal ticket get plastered around the ring.

As soon as Schlossberg sold Schaaf to Jack Sharkey and Johnny Buckley, he bought DeKuh for [illegible]. DeKuh is six feet four inches tall and weighs 230 pounds. Schlossberg probably figures DeKuh has the style that will beat Schaaf. Like most managers, he probably thinks he knows the weaknesses of his former boxer.

If DeKuh can get by Dorval, he will be in a position to demand a match with Schaaf. The latter won't avoid the issue. Ernie feels he can lick any heavyweight in the world, and he has been doing a pretty good job of proving his contention when in the ring under fire.

Dorval has ideas of getting another bout with Schaaf, and so may be expected to rest in his corner and permit DeKuh to go his way merrily.

EDDIE MACK whispers that he has signed Billy Barlow of this city and Al Walker of Brunswick, Fla., for the eight-round semifinal. Elmer Chase of New Bedford and Bud Mignault of Brockton get together in a six-rounder.

SAM PRICE is running around town trying to get three heavyweights to oppose Ernie Schaaf at Fall River on next Wednesday night. Chance to relieve the unemployment situation.

TOOTS MONDT admits Jack Washburn should have been awarded the decision over Pat O'Shocker when the red-headed warrior failed to return to the ring at the Garden after winning the second fall on a foul. Toots agrees with our opinion that a wrestler must be in the ring to win. He isn't hot for dressing room decisions.

REFEREE BERT Potts could have disqualified Washburn and declared O'Shocker the winner at the time of the fall. But he neglected to do so. He only gave Pat a fall. He couldn't give him another fall as he rested peacefully in his dressing room. Toots intends to re-match the pair, but will insist that O'Shocker do a little road work and get off some of the fat he carried in the ring the other night.

GEORGE KOTSONAROS, Greek heavyweight, insisted that his proposed tussle with George McLeod at the Garden on next Wednesday night have no time limit. Hooray for Kotsonaros. I like to see two grapplers battle until one or the other has his shoulders pinned to the canvas.

McLEOD favored a winner-take-all match, but wouldn't go for a tussle without a time limit. Mondt finally was obliged to drop Kotsonaros from his card and replace him by Kolo Kwariani, Russian heavyweight. The time will be one hour, best two falls out of three with the winner picking up all of the marbles.

25 on Mass. State Baseball Squad

Amherst, March 12—Preparations for the baseball season at Mass. State are under way with 25 men reporting to Coach Mel Taube.

Four letter men are out for the team: Capt. Ernest Mitchell of Newburyport, catcher; Johnny Tikofski of Walpole, pitcher; Freddy Welch of Rockland, second baseman, and Johnny Burrington of Charlemont, outfielder. George Cain of Braintree, pitcher, infielder and outfielder is not expected to report until the spring term opens.

Voigt, Thompson in Final

Hamilton, Bermuda, March 12 (AP)—George Voigt of New York and Nicol Thompson, Jr., of Toronto, were matched in the 36-hole finals of the Bermuda amateur golf championship today.

Mary Carew Defends Track Title in Newark Meet

Newark, N. J., March 12—Mary Carew of Medford, Mass., and Jean Shiley of Philadelphia, high jumper, defend their national women's indoor titles in the championship track meeting here tonight in the Armory.

Rena MacDonald, Dedham, Mass., girl, is another title defender, in the shotput.

CUBS START FINAL DRIVE TONIGHT

By BILL GRIMES

After a ten day break in their schedule, the Brun Cubs resume their fight for a playoff berth in the Canadian American League against the Rhode Island Reds tonight at the Boston Garden.

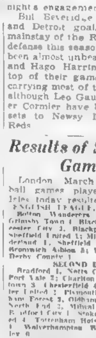
The constant changing of players between the Bruins and the Cubs has taken its toll from the minor league club and has been of little or no benefit to the Rossmen.

Although the Can-Am League race is in the home stretch, with the Cubs easing along with the elite of that circuit, they are by no means secure from elimination. The Arrows are far from out of the running despite the fact that they have one less game to play than the Cubs. The Powers outfit must keep going at top speed to the wire.

Conn Takes Place Vacated by Cook

With Bud Cook out for the remainder of the season, as a result of his injury in Springfield, Red Conn has been promoted to the first line working with Dede Klein and Eddie Burke. Conn has appeared to better advantage in each of the recent games and he should be at his best playing with two such capable wings as Klein and Burke.

The second line will be composed of Donny Weir at center and Eddie Jeremiah and Happy Harnott on the wings, while Manager Powers will also try out his two latest acquisitions, Hal Johnson and Milton Brink, a couple of ex-amateurs from Eveleth, Minn.



Ed Burke

Although the Rhode Island Reds have been handicapped through injuries and sickness of late, they have been winning with marked regularity. The Reds will lead the contenders for Can-Am honors by a very comfortable margin, for they have six more games to play after tonight's engagement with the Cubs.

Bill Beveridge, former Ottawa and Detroit goalie, has been the mainstay of the Rhode Island Reds' defense this season. Beveridge has been almost unbeatable. Gizzy Hart and Hago Harrington are at the top of their game and have been carrying most of the offensive load, although Leo Gaudreault and Roger Cormier have been valuable assets to Newsy Lalonde and the Reds.

Liver if Eaten Daily Cures Anemia

By DR. R. S. COPELAND

Dr. Copeland

WHAT is at first hailed as "an important medical discovery" often causes a lot of uncalled for excitement. Too often it proves to be disappointing in its results.

But the discovery of the use of liver in the treatment of pernicious anemia has fulfilled its claims. In 1926 two scientists, Minot and Murphy, announced that a liver diet was of great assistance in treating and correcting anemic conditions. Since then, thousands of afflicted persons have been returned to normal health by eating liver or taking liver extract.

Pernicious anemia is a disease of the blood, causing lack of pep and inability to work. The patient tires easily and upon exertion becomes short of breath.

The skin is usually of a yellowish lemon tint. The appetite is poor and the digestion faulty and occasionally there is a feeling of faintness. In severe forms there is loss of weight as well as marked intestinal disturbances.

It is now known that one-half pound of liver eaten as part of the daily diet increases the number of red blood cells and the amount of hemoglobin. Of course the liver must be eaten daily.

Not only does this diet increase the hemoglobin and the number of red blood cells, but it improves the general health of the sufferer. Within three days, often sooner, there is new strength and an increase in the appetite. The shortness of breath, as well as other symptoms, gradually disappear.

Beef or calf's liver or the liver of other animals, may be used. It may be taken raw, or finely ground, or cooked in any way that makes it appeal to the taste. It is more easily digested when finely ground.

Answers to Health Queries

Mrs. R. B. O. Q.—Is there any cure for chronic mastitis other than the knife?

A.—This depends upon the local condition—your doctor should be able to advise you definitely since he is familiar with the facts in the case.

Bound to One, Loves Another

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have been going with a young man for a year and a half, who has only been in this country for three years. Lately he told me he had promised a girl in his country, and has also told his parents he would marry her. But he has not seen the girl for three years. He only writes to her. He claims he must go back to his home to straighten things out but says he would then be free. I am sure he loves me as I love him.

ANXIOUS

Dear Anxious—These old world engagements are often very binding affairs, and if the young man really intends to break with his former sweetheart, and intends to marry you, it would be safer to break on this side of the Atlantic by letter—less painful for the girl in Europe, too.

The Beauty Box

BLOOD-RED FINGER nails are as passe as nails filed to resemble pointed claws. Buy the veneer that imparts the natural pink rosebud tint. Don't cover the white crescent at the nail base or the white line of the nail eave when putting it on with the camel's hair brush. An additional shine comes up by rubbing the nails in the palm of the hand.

MURDER OF THE NIGHT CLUB LADY

Colt Names Possible Slayers

By ANTHONY ABBOT

"AND WHEN you get [illegible] through you'll come back to my [illegible] idea," predicted Dougherty gratefully accepting a second glass from the Jamaican butler.

"Perhaps," conceded Colt, "but in the meanwhile, you would not have us overlook the other possibilities within the ambit of this inquiry."

"No. But I can't keep whiffling from one opinion to another. You mean——"

"I mean that granting at the moment we do not know how Lola Carewe and Christine Quires were slain, there are a number of people who might have killed them. We begin with Guy Everett. He had a motive of one kind or another; it seems trivial, but if he had a grudge against Lola and Christine, he might have slain them—sordid, if you like—but sheer malice has served as the motive of many murders in our records. Then there was the elevator boy. Not a very dignified or likely suspect—and yet, so far as we know he was the last person to see Christine Quires while she was conscious. Eunice James seems to have had no motive at all—yet she might have. But Mrs. Carewe was annoyed by Christine's presence in the apartment—in senile madness she might have killed her daughter and guest. Chung had his reasons. Never forget the fury of the Cyclops—the malicious vengeance of the ugly man who considers himself a superior being, who loves and is turned down. Perhaps, indeed, so did Vincent Rowland have a motive. Or Doctor Baldwin, unapt to do such a deed, yet with opportunities, as you very wisely suggest. Again, the brother would have a million-dollar reason for wishing to get rid of his sister—and God knows he would not be the first brother to kill his sister with tricky deceitfulness and for the same reason. I could go on, widening the list, but for our purposes the ones I have named are sufficient."

"I believe there was more than one murderer. There were at least two. Whatever happened it was too complicated for just one person to get away with it," declared Dougherty fervently.

"Bravo, Dougherty," cried Thatcher Colt. "Your reasoning sounds accurate. But what if the poor girls were the accomplices in their own execution?"

"I hadn't thought of that," confessed Dougherty. "Sounds metaphysical again. How could they be?"

"I don't know—but three are several theories that occur to me."

"The very look of the corpse," declared Dougherty, "suggested poison to me. Have you formed any notion as to what kind of poison might have been used?"

"Not in the least. But Multooler has promised the earliest possible word. In any case, I still feel we are dealing with a highly superior criminal intelligence. Even as far as we have gone, we can see that the plan was outrageously well worked out."

In [illegible] from the dark [illegible] of [illegible] 17th [illegible] and the clinking of milk bottles carried in a basket.

Colt [illegible] his pipe.

"If the poison," he resumed, "had reached the girl on the tip of an arrow blown from a blow gun, a sarbacand, or something of that sort, our job would have been much simpler. But Multooler says there is not an open wound on her body. Our guilty one has already evinced a truly infernal cunning, thinking to commit the perfect crime, no doubt. Of course we three in this room know there is no such thing. There is always a flaw in these perfectly planned atrocities. There is a flaw somewhere in this penthouse business tonight—only we haven't found it yet."

The telephone bell rang. From my extension, I heard the brittle voice of the Assistant Medical Examiner greeting Thatcher Colt.

"Hello, Mr. Colt! Say, this case gets funnier every time you turn around. I don't care how mysterious it sounds, it begins to look like those two girls died natural deaths. At least, I can't find any poison in them."

I heard the sharp intake of Colt's breath. It was a body blow to his plan. What hope was there of tracing a murder if the police were unable to prove the girls had died unnaturally?

"How thorough was your examination?" asked the Commissioner.

"I had six assistants working with me—we went through everything, including the viscera."

"You found no symptoms at all?" demanded Colt, amazed.

"Well, I found a very queer condition in both cadavers, but I don't know what it means. There was a congestion of the muscles around the two hearts, you see—sufficient to cause death. But the valves of the hearts showed every indication that they had been functioning properly all their lives."

"Just one minute," interrupted Colt. "Are you certain of that last statement?"

"Of course, Mr. Colt!"

"There was no indication of a history of old heart trouble? In either girl?"

"None whatever. The girls' hearts were sound as a dollar."

"But Dr. Baldwin told us Lola had suffered from a weak heart."

"Something wrong there, Mr. Colt. I know damn well that her heart could not have suddenly gone haywire and caused the condition I found. The heart muscle constrictions in both girls were simply unbelievable."

What's Friendship---Honest to Goodness Friendship?

By ELSIE ROBINSON

MARY IVES was [illegible] me to write a definition of a [illegible] honest to goodness friend.

Nobody can do that [illegible], Mary. Friendship is like all else that is fine in life—like love or charity or honesty or faith—IT IS AS GREAT AS OUR INDIVIDUAL CAPACITY.

"A friend" is not a certain, definite sort of human being who conforms to a certain [illegible] standard of behavior, nor do friends "just happen" to us through the mysterious hocus-pocus of love.

A friend is an ANSWER—an answer to some NEED WITHIN OURSELVES.

How noble is your need? How fine is your desire? Why do you really want that friendship? What do you really expect from that friend?

At once a charming picture flashes through your mind. You see yourself and your friend enjoying a beautiful companionship, guiding each other through the difficult mazes of life, sympathizing with each other in suffering, [illegible] each other in fine [illegible].

Oh, yeah? But honest now, is that the form your friendship will really take? Perhaps it is. There are friendships like that. There are people who are strong and wise enough to endure a sincere and stimulating friendship.

BUT MOST OF US DON'T WANT ANYTHING OF THE SORT.

We want someone who will coddle our weakness—

Condone our laziness—

Alibi our cussedness—

Flatter our vanity—

Listen to all our beats and bellyakes—

Let us [illegible] to our hearts content—

And help us escape from irksome responsibility and depressing reality.

IN SHORT WHAT WE WANT IN A FRIEND IS A GOOD, RELIABLE YES-MAN WHO WILL HELP US GO ON BEING THE SILLY, WEAK CREATURES WHICH WE ARE.

AND WE'D BE BEWILDERED, PEEVED AND BORED BY THE WISE, STRONG RUTHLESSLY HONEST FRIEND OF OUR DAY DREAMS.

Why do friends fail us?

That's why we PICK FRIENDS WHO WILL FAIL US. Our friends fail us because in our secret hearts, we fail ourselves.

A true friend should understand, but never flatter.

He should sympathize with suffering, but never condone the weakness that caused the suffering.

He should love you and yet despise all that is weak in you, and expect you to do the same to him.

He should help you face, but never help you run away from it.

He should [illegible] himself with you, but never give himself to you nor allow you to possess him.

He should be himself, and let you be yourself. He should, even in the most intimate friendship, love freedom, give freedom, insist upon freedom—and be able to endure the responsibilities and loneliness which comes from free souls.

STOP THAT COLD

DISTRESSING cold in chest or throat—that so often leads to something serious—generally responds to good old Musterole with the first application. Should be more effective if used once every hour for five hours.

This famous blend of oil of mustard, camphor, menthol and other helpful ingredients brings relief naturally. Musterole gets action because it is a scientific "counter-irritant"—not just a salve—it penetrates and stimulates blood circulation, helps to draw out infection and pain. Used by millions for 20 years. Recommended by doctors and nurses.

To Mothers—Musterole is also made in milder form for babies and small children. Ask for Children's Musterole.

Daily True Story

Hidden Dope

THE AVERAGE policeman can understand why another man might become a bootlegger, and, if he feels strongly enough about it, even sympathize with him. Cops are only human.

Some of them can even understand that force of circumstances and dire need would drive another man to robbery.

But never will you find a cop worthy of his shield who has anything but loathing and contempt for the dope peddler. That's one crime on which the average cop has only one answer, [illegible].

Jim Eldridge was an average policeman, six years in the service and getting a try-out as a detective member of the narcotic squad. He liked the work because he believed in it and he had seen enough of what happens to victims of dope pedlars to realize that it was necessary, vital work.

And then one of the most important cases he had worked on collapsed in his hands. He took it pretty hard [illegible] Helen [illegible] day he hoped to get up nerve enough to tell her the most important one of all.

JIM EXPLAINS TO HELEN

"It was like this," said Jim. "I know as well as I know I'm sitting here that Schatner is selling dope. I got a line on him and finally arranged for a man to make a buy. We had to have evidence. But Schatner's pretty shrewd. The only place he'll sell is in his home and we can't raid that without a warrant. And we can't get a warrant without making a buy.

"Well, this man went in and Schatner was all ready to sell him. In fact the sale was made and our man had the stuff in his hand [illegible]. Then he lost his head and blew a police whistle instead of coming out with it. He said that the stuff was knocked from his hand and that he distinctly remembers it spilling all over the floor. Then somebody socked him. When we finally got in there wasn't a trace of dope, not a sign of it. We've got Schatner but we can't prove our case in court without evidence. He'll claim a frame-up and where will we be with no evidence?"

"But what happened to the cocaine that was spilled on the floor?" asked Helen.

"[illegible]," answered Jim. "[illegible] we searched every inch of that room and [illegible] find it. Schatner and the others didn't have it on them. It must be in the house somewhere. We've got a man on guard there but we can't find it."

"I never yet saw a man who could find anything," answered Helen. "Why, that reminds me of the time father lost—" She stopped suddenly. Then she said, "I bet I can find it."

"Where?" asked Jim.

"Never mind," she answered. "You get me in that house [illegible]

[illegible]

"[illegible]," answered [illegible] "[illegible] even find it [illegible] sometimes. But are you really serious?"

"You take me to that house tomorrow and I'll show you," answered Helen.

Jim did just that. The next morning he [illegible] Helen went to Schatner home. He led her into the living room and pointed to the carpet on the floor.

"The stuff was spilled around here," he said.

Helen looked about her. Then she walked out into the hall and opened a closet door.

"It's not here," she said. "Where's the kitchen?"

Jim led her to it, protesting that it had already been searched.

"Yes, but not by a woman," she answered. She opened the door of the kitchen closet.

"I'll bet it's there," she said, pointing.

Two minutes later Jim had the hidden cocaine, the evidence with which to convict Schatner. Carefully he poured a mixture of cocaine and dust into a paper bag.

"How did you happen to think of it?" he asked Helen. "Why, I looked at that thing myself and it never crossed my mind to examine it. I didn't even know how they worked."

"Of course you didn't," said Helen. "That's not a man's work. But as soon as you spoke about that dope disappearing so completely I thought of the time father began storming through the house looking for a tie clasp he had dropped somewhere. He nearly tore the house to pieces. Then mother found it in the bag of the vacuum cleaner.

"So I was practically certain that if there was a vacuum cleaner in this house, it had been used to clean up that cocaine. And there it is."

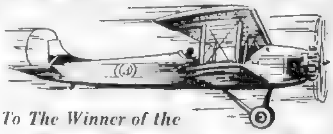
A FREE AIRPLANE TRIP TO DETROIT AND RETURN



To The Winner of the

"Aero Facts Contest"

Conducted by the

BOSTON AMERICAN

in co-operation with air transport section, Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce of America

Each day, important "Aero Facts" questions will be asked. On the final day, March 18th, a subject will be given for a 100-word essay. Contestants will be required to keep all questions and answers until the series has been completed and then to send these answers with the essays. The winner will be awarded a free round-trip airplane ride to Detroit, where he will be taken on a 60-mile airplane flight around the airports of Detroit, enjoy a sight-seeing tour of the city, a tour of the Ford automobile plant, and be an escorted guest at the National Aircraft Show to be held April 2nd to 10th.

ANY YOUNG MAN BETWEEN THE AGES OF 15 AND 20 IS ELIGIBLE TO COMPETE

HERE ARE THE RULES:

1. The contest is open to any boy reader of the Boston American between the ages of 15 and 20.
2. Members of the families of employes of the Hearst newspapers in Boston and employes of any air transportation company are ineligible to compete.
3. All 25 questions printed during the thirteen days of the contest must be answered and the complete set forwarded in one mailing to the "Aero Facts" Contest Editor, Boston American, Box 185, Boston, Mass.
4. No answers postmarked after midnight on March 23rd will be considered.
5. The questions have been prepared by the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce of America which retains the correct answers to the first 24 questions. The 25th question will be judged on the merits of the contribution itself.
6. The Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce will appoint two judges and the Boston American will appoint the third judge, who shall judge the answers and essays of all contestants and select the winner.
7. The decision of the judges shall in all cases be final and each competitor agrees, as a condition of his entry in the contest, that he will accept such decision without question or appeal.
8. The winner shall only be entitled to the prize trip if, and when, his parents shall have signed a release absolving all parties to the contest, including the airplane carriers, the newspapers and the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce and the Aircraft Expositions Corporation from all responsibility for accidents, and an adequate policy of accident insurance will be provided to cover the winner on his trip from the time of leaving his home city until his return.
9. In the event of a failure of the parents of the winner to sign satisfactory releases, the winner of the trip shall be the entry next in order, as selected by the judges, who can meet the qualifying conditions.
10. The Boston American reserves the right to alter or amend these rules at any time during the contest.

TODAY'S QUESTIONS, MARCH 12

13. How many air lines operate planes in and out of your city?
14. (A) What types and makes of planes do the air lines operating in and out of your city use?
 (B) How many pounds of mail and how many passengers can each plane carry?

Keep until essay subject is announced. Then send to "Aero Facts" Contest Editor, Boston American, Box 185, Boston, Mass.

PERSONALITIES OF AIR

The American Dental Ass'n has formally complained to the Federal Radio Commission about the exaggerations some of the toothpaste sponsors are making about their products.

False teeth always have been a source for complaint, but false toothpaste, my, my!

Watch WBZ. NBC's more than [illegible] interest in this station has [illegible] to show itself. Two new N. Y. p'grams were added last night [illegible] this eve. and three more tomorrow. Ere long late eve. NBC dance music will be heard over BZ . . . Lilyan Tashman, Met Theater attraction, will be interviewed by Linus Travers from the Grove Mon. at 12:45 WNAC. She also does an interview turn on that station at 6:15 this eve . . . Sid Reinherz is working on a piano novelty p'gram that sponsors will soon be grabbing at . . . One half guess why Hum & Strum are considering renaming themselves the "Benefiteers" . . . The Tipplers who desert WNAC for a WEEI turn Tues., are thinking of adding a voice to their harmony duoing . . . Rudy Vallee says Lew Conrad's voice is glorious and Lew says Rudy's voice is glorious. What'chacall glorious reciprocation.

Of the dozen P. Whiteman audition finalists, four are WLOE'ers. Now will you listen to WLOE . . . WEEI has delved into Fitchburg to sign a hillbilly orch. . . . Buck Jones will be guest of Interviewer Travers on WNAC at 5:15 tomorrow . . . Irene Rich is WEEIed at 1 tomorrow.

When Sen. Huey Long of La. makes an air address he interrupts himself several times to tell who he is and what he is talking about.

Oh, if only crooners would enlighten listeners similarly and tell what they're trying to do at the mike!

And some of the orchs! An'ncers should step in and reveal the title of the ditty being played to allay suspicions that a static plague has broken out.

Tony Ponselle, brother of Diva Rosa Ponselle, has succumbed to the radio urge and will strike out for vocal fame when he is debuted on WTIC Mon. . . . When Donna (Myrt and Marge) Damerel becomes the Radio Queen next month, remember who first told you . . . The Boswell girls' Make Up Box p'gram is fading away from the ether . . . Inhale for the finale. CBS p'grams will resemble a glorified St. Vitus Dance next wk. Bing Crosby jumps ahead to 6:45; Jack Miller and orch. drop to a 6:30 period; Boston's Funnyboners will take over a 10:45 p. m. spot; Easy Aces will hop to 7:30; Music that Satisfies will try out a 10 p. m. period Wed. and Sat. And that concludes our "changes" for today. Until CBS breaks out again, thank you.

Stray Thought No. 6: "No man is greater than the game that made him." And in the same vein, "No artist is greater than his sponsor."

POLITICAL NEWS

O'HARA RETURNING

Former Mayor Michael J. O'Hara of Worcester, who announced his candidacy for the Republican nomination for governor several weeks ago, is due to return to Boston from a trip to South America on April 4. At that time his friends say he will start actively on his campaign.

FAILED TO REGISTER

James Roosevelt, son of the New York governor, according to those who have checked up on Cambridge City Hall records, although a resident of that city a year ago and listed, failed to register on the voting list. In other words he will not become a voter of Massachusetts until sometime after the first of next month.

GETS POSTCARD

"Charlie" Reardon, vice-chairman of the Democratic state committee, is in receipt of a postcard from former Mayor Fitzgerald from Palm Beach, Fla., which reads: "Your friend Ritchie has many friends in the South."

TO PICK SLATES

The slates of candidates for delegates-at-large to the Democratic and Republican national conventions will be placed on the ballot in the order of the choice of the persons holding power of attorney to select the slates, and not alphabetically as some seem to think.

CARDS FOR BARRY

Supporters of Thomas E. Barry, who recently announced his candidacy for Legislature in East Boston, last night began distribution of 10,000 pledge cards in his behalf. Barry is past president of the Quincy Club of that district, past commander of Lieut. Lawrence J. Flaherty Post, American Legion and the Boy Scouts of America.

SULLIVAN TO ORATE

Henry J. Sullivan of the street-laying-out department in City Hall, will be orator at the Irish Day observance of the Boston Kiwanis Club in the City Club at noon next Tuesday.

REPLACES REARDON

John A. Sullivan is acting as private secretary to Mayor Curley in the absence of Secy. Cornelius A. Reardon, who left New York last night on a short vacation trip to Havana.

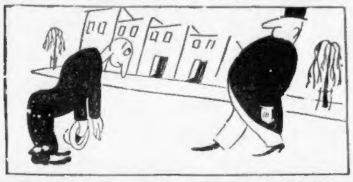
Vow to Be Mumbled, With Hats Off, When Bankers Pass



"The whole trouble is with the people's frame of mind—they are suspicious and until they display confidence in the financial leadership of this nation they will have to endure the discomforts they have brought upon themselves."—Bankers' statement.

Dear Mister Banker—

I have been suspicious, since I lost my shirt,
But your statement shames me . . . I'm sorry that I hurt
The feelings of the leaders, who three years ago,
Gave me bogus foreign bonds for my hard earned dough.
I must try to see that I'm of course to blame,
For the bed I lie in—I hang my head in shame.
I'm sorry I was touchy—sorry I was sore—
I'll slip my earnings, henceforth, underneath your door.
I will never question . . . I will never doubt
That financial leaders know what they're about.
I will never whimper, I must never sigh—
I will try to smile when you snatch out my eye.

And gals who dress with neat reserve
Get salary cuts, you may observe.

Little Willie, mean as sin,
Popped his Daddy on the chin.
Mother murmured, weak with chuckles,
"Dearie, next time tape your knuckles."

GIVE WAR BACK TO PROFESSIONALS FOR SAFETY

By GILBERT SELDES

GILBERT SELDES

ACCORDING TO THE BEST AUTHORITY, Man was created upright, but made himself many inventions. Most of these he promptly turned over to those capable of using them, flagpoles to flagpole sitters, airplanes to fliers, radio to gossips, crooners, and superannuated minstrels, graft to politicians, and small arms to professional soldiers. In the course of 2500 years, of which only some two hundred were devoted to universal peace, it has been found adequate to human needs to have wars conducted by these hired professionals; they knew their business, fought just as long as they were paid, regardless of the emotional value of war, changed sides promptly, butchered in accordance with a definite code of butchery, and won and lost wars without too much bother and expense to their employers. The world gave them mean names: mercenaries, for example, and condottieri; but it never questioned their skill and good faith. They attended to the limited blood-letting which the world required, like doctors, on a larger scale.

Patriotism and War

The appaling idea of a nation under arms, of civilians rushing to their muskets, is an invention of democracy. It was foreshadowed in the War of Independence, on the winning side, regrettably. The British had in the first line their professionals and in the second, the hired Hessians; the American colonists, having no regular army, were compelled to offer to every man the chance of learning a profession, and dug out of the classics an isolated and entirely uncharacteristic remark to the effect that it is sweet and proper to die for one's country.

At once, emotion was injected into war, where it is out of place; and the French Revolution, emotional always to the point of hysteria, was so enchanted by the success of American arms, that it created national armies. The battle of Valmy (Sept. 10, 1792), is the starting point of the gravest error humanity has ever accepted; from it you may date the race of armaments, the idea of universal military training, the Great War, and among disasters, the peace and disarmament conferences of the 20th century.

Loyal Non-Combatants

The error lies in the association of two ideas which have naturally nothing in common: the idea of patriotism and the idea of bearing arms. The plays of Shakespeare are full of a patriotic rabble, no member of which would dream of rushing to the defense of the flag. Soldiers were dragged, drugged, or tricked into service, and good aristocrats were loyal and devoted to their motherland without ever imagining themselves bound to go forth on expeditions. In those days it was a simple matter to begin or to end a war, because wars were made without passion, without Four-Minute Men, Liberty Loans and atrocities. It took some skill to find a new enemy each time, because in the end money had to be collected and people hated to suffer starvation in a beleaguered town; but these were the accidents of war. The normal thing was simple and unemotional and comparatively clean.

No Civilians

The best part of the old system was that, strictly speaking, there were no civilians, just as, strictly speaking, there will be no civilians in the next war. In the first case civilians didn't exist as a separate category—because the army was not composed of citizens, but of experts; to say that there were civilians and soldiery in those days is like saying that there are civilians and jailbirds in New York today. In the next war, for the purposes of bombing, the enemy will consider that we are all soldiers, and they will be very nearly right.

But there will always remain enough old men not in uniform to give us a full taste of the horrors of war. The habits of the last war are ingrained by this time; even the distant smoke of burning Chinese villages sets us pawing the ground, and we have already had as good atrocity stories—on both sides!—as ever came out of Belgium. By proxy we are already participating in drives, hunting spies, and crucifying non-subscribers to loans; somewhere in obscure colleges men are busy proving that Confucius was not Chinese and that the Japanese are cruel to goldfish. A war is a war, even if we are not in it.

War for the Warriors

My proposal is simply the restoration of professional armies. No one who went through the rigors of camp life in America in 1918 can honestly say that the average man is competent to deal with the mechanisms of war. For myself, I broke down in the third week when a petrolated rifle was issued to me and I was ordered to clean it, which involves taking apart some of the intricate bits and restoring them more or less to their original positions. By the time the next war comes, most of the soldiers will have sub-calibre machine guns—we can learn from our gangsters even if we cannot jail them. The issue of gas masks will be elaborate, one for bacteria and one for chlorine and so on—up to 10. In spite of the American's natural bent for machinery, I feel that most of us will be incompetent; we will waste time. And in the meanwhile, those we leave behind will be wasting motion.

War has become so complicated that it had best be left to the experts. It should be restored to its professional status, treated coldly as the main business of nations, requiring a larger corps than the body of postal servants, but essentially like any other governmental duty. The trouble with our wars now is that they enlist amateurs and enthusiasts; and, at the same time, they create a false equation between making war and loving one's country. They disturb the emotions and will have an evil effect on the population, for who would procreate if wars continue to be popular instead of professional?

1700 MILE TRIP FOR LUCKY BOY

New England's Air-Minded Boy will travel 1700 miles by air as the guest of the Boston Evening American and the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce of America.

When he steps from the plane at Detroit, to attend the National Aircraft Show, he will find himself among other representative boys of America.

Winners of similar contests conducted by eleven Hearst newspapers throughout the country will be at the mammoth exposition of the aviation industry.

From Boston, New York, Baltimore, Washington, Atlanta, Seattle, San Antonio, Omaha, Pittsburgh, Chicago, Albany and San Antonio, these boys will gather.

They will travel in the finest ships, the most safe and the most modern, for their thrill of a lifetime.

Today's questions in the contest are on one of these pages. With them are the rules which must be followed carefully.

RADIO AWARDED IN PATRIOTIC PUZZLE CONTEST

Joseph L. Nolan, of 295 Franklin st., Boston, will be able to tune in on radio broadcasts this spring and ball games next summer, having been awarded as first prize in Series D of the Washington Patriotic Prize Puzzles, a distinctive table model Legionnaire radio from Davis' Hardware Stores, of 124 Summer st.

Abbie E. Lerned, of 201 Belmont st., Everett, was adjudged winner of the second prize, a handsome Waltham wrist watch from the home outfitting store of George Yaffe of 116 Washington st.

Edith Pray, of 1412 Commonwealth ave., Brookline, is fortunate in having won third award, four guest tickets to a leading Shuberb productiton, because she and her friends will see the first presentation of a series of musicals under the sponsorship of the newly reorganized "Bostonians."

The play will be "The New Moon," the delightful operetta which opens in the Boston Opera House Wednesday evening, March 30. Leading musical comedy stars will play the leads, including Charlotte Lansing and Michael Bartlett. An interesting feature of the Bostonian productions will be the augmentation of the choruses by groups of trained Boston vocalists.

Fourth prize award, an all-expenses-paid evening's entertainment for two at the Hotel Westminster "Seaglades," featuring Mickie Alpert, Cliff O'Rourke and other artists, was won by J. H. Davison of 28 Harvard st., Melrose.

Fifth prize, five guest tickets to the Washington St. Olympia Theater, were won by F. C. Dimond of 14 Lowell st., Beverly. Dimond and his friends will see "High Pressure," starring William Powell and Evelyn Brent, and "This Reckless Age" with Charles "Buddy" Rogers as star.

Six to tenth prizes, two guest tickets each for the current attraction at the Washington St. Olympia, were won by the following: Mrs. Harry Watts, 158 Cypress st., Providence; Mrs. Neal W. Webster, 16 Fair Oaks ave., Lawrence; Robert L. Adams, 119 Hemenway st., Boston; F. S. Bailey, 14 Hillcrest rd., East Braintree, and John W. Noyes, Weston rd., Reading.

Eleventh to twentieth prizes, single guest tickets to the Washington St. Olympia, were won by Charles F. Brown, 76 Nonantum st., Brighton; Charles A. McDonald, 41 Hilton st., Arlington; Gerald F. Rousseau, 95 Andrews st., Lowell; Viola A. Ballou, 91 Summit rd., Medford; Louise M. Davis, 26 Museum rd., Boston; Nettie Myers, 93 Lexington st., East Boston; Frank A. McLain, 70 Grove st., West Roxbury; Gretchen Brown, 209 Huntington ave., Boston; George A. Derby, 77 Manning st., Hudson, and John J. McCarthy, 197 Lakeview ave., Cambridge.

SCOUTS 'RULE' IN BRAINTREE

Boy Scouts ran the town of Braintree today. Twenty-five of them were policemen, 18 were firemen and three directed operations as selectmen. Another was town clerk and another superintendent of streets. Philip Lazendorf was chief of police, while Russell Woodfall was chief of the fire department.

The board of selectmen was composed of David Keen, chairman; Randolph Gibson and Roger Arnold. Winslow Davenport was town clerk

FAMOUS KIDNAPING MYSTERIES

The Varotta Case

By WIN BROOKS

(This is the 10th in a series of articles by Win Brooks, Boston Evening American staff writer, dealing with famous kidnaping mysteries.)

As aggravating to public curiosity as is the reticence adopted by New Jersey state police in regard to developments in the Lindbergh case, there is much to be said in support of that policy.

The trailing of kidnapers who hold a child as hostage is too dangerous a game, with too high a stake, to permit of a single wrong move.

There is on record in New York a child abduction case in which actually brilliant police work resulting in the apprehension of the kidnapers cost the life of the victim.

The safe recovery of an abducted child should be the paramount issue in any such case, whether the victim be a Lindbergh or, as in the case to which I refer, an olive skinned child of poor family reared in the grassless canyons of Gotham's "Little Italy."

Let it not be assumed that in 1921, when kidnapers seized little Giuseppe Varotta, that because the victim was a child of the tenements police moved to apprehend the criminals without regard to the safety of the victim.

On the contrary, working under extreme handicaps and in great secrecy, they developed their case to a climax intended to result in the recovery of Giuseppe and the arrest of his abductors at the same time.

But the trap they set and baited so cleverly, they sprang too soon, and Giuseppe's life was forfeit.

TRIO "DOING" LIFE

It is a tragic story and at the same time one most interesting from a legal standpoint, for three men who were in the Tombs when Giuseppe paid the penalty of too much police activity, were convicted of his murder, sentenced to death by electrocution and are serving life imprisonment after commutation of the death sentence.

The Varottas lived in Thirteenth st.—Salvatore and Mrs. Varotta and their several children, including Giuseppe who, at the time he was stolen, was five.

The motive for the kidnaping was ransom. Blabber-mouthed neighborhood gossip, founded on rumor, indirectly cost Giuseppe's life. This was the manner of it:

Some time in April of 1921, one of Salvatore Varotta's brood (not Giuseppe) was struck and injured by an automobile. Varotta filed an action seeking damages, and trial of the suit was still pending when busy old Dame Rumor spread the word that Varotta had received an astoundingly large sum of money ($25,000 most reports had it) in settlement.

RUMORS FALSE

The fact of the matter was that Varotta had had an offer of $500 and hadn't decided what to do about it.

All that is known of the dark-eyed Guiseppe's disappearance is best recounted in the words of his mother, spoken from the witness stand at the trial of the first man indicted for the murder of her boy:

"The afternoon of May 24 at 3 o'clock was the last I ever saw of my little Guiseppe. He was playing in 13th st., in front of our home, with other children. He called up to me, 'Mama, mama, give me a penny for some candy.' I told him to come up and gave him that last penny. I never saw him again."

Two days after Giuseppe vanished his father received a letter from his kidnapers, signed with the Black Hand and setting forth that unless $2500 ransom was paid Giuseppe would be dropped into the Hudson river.

On the day after receipt of the letter, Antonio Marino, a slight acquaintance of the Varottas, dropped in at the home and subtly suggested that the boy would be returned if the money was paid to an agent of the kidnapers.

Another acquaintance, Roberto Raffaele, did the same.

GETS SECOND LETTER

Varotta protested and swore in the name of all that was holy that he didn't have $2500 or any part of it and knew not where to get the money.

A second Black Hand letter arrived, renewing the demand and setting forth the same threat, and again Varotta burned the letter, fearing not only for his own life but for the lives of other members of his family if he made its contents known.

Marino and Raffaele renewed their suggestion and a man named Santo Cusamano, who lived across the street from Varotta, met the father on the street one day and said he knew the boy was well and was "getting plenty of eats" and would be safely returned if the ransom were paid.

It would have been queer, indeed, if Varotta's suspicions had not been directed at Marino Raffaele and Cusamano, but fear of Black Hand retribution held him fast and police were up against the proverbial stone wall.

Instead of setting about to tear it down they climbed it with a bit of smart detective work.

A week after the kidnaping, Mrs. Rae Nicoletti, bearing luggage containing gifts from Italy, swooped down upon the Varotta home, hugged Mrs. Varotta and smacked a big kiss on her cheek.

Mrs. Varotta was slightly surprised, not knowing Mrs. Nicoletti from a hole in the ground, but her surprise turned to delight upon learning that Mrs. Nicoletti was her cousin, whom she had known only as a child in Italy. They kissed again and the cousin from Italy unpacked her presents brought from the homeland for the Varotta children and asked if she might remain a few days at the house until proceeding to Detroit to visit "Cousin Maria."

Of course she could! She was told to make herself quite at home—but sorrow had descended upon the house and she would not find much of happiness here. Sorrow? The Black Hand! They kidnaped little Giuseppe not eight days since and they are holding him for $2500 which, by the Holy Father, Varotta cannot pay! The Black Hand? The Black Hand! Who are they? You shall see, this Marino, this Cusamano and others. What if you don't pay the money? Ah, God, they drop little Giuseppe in the river! But the American police? Can't they get little Giuseppe? No, the police must know nothing or the Black Hand will wipe out all the Varottas, big and little.

COUSIN A DETECTIVE

Of course, this cousin from Italy was a bogus cousin, one of the smartest policewomen on the New York force, who had been studying for days the immigration records and the cabled records of Italian police on all that was available of the history of Mr. and Mrs. Varotta.

She played her part to perfection. She was present when Marino and Raffaele came to the house and agreed, for $600, to get Giuseppe away from the gang that held him and return him in two hours time.

She left the house daily to telephone her reports to the police and she marked, on every occasion, the trailing figure of Cusamano, whose own suspicions had been aroused by her presence in the house.

She got every available fact and every suspicion that the Varottas had and she jockeyed Mr. and Mrs. Varotta into a position where they obtained $500 and told Marino to come the following day to collect it and have member of his gang with him as evidence of good faith.

Then the next afternoon, she tampered with the plumbing in the Varotta home and it doesn't need much tampering with the plumbing in such homes before the services of a plumber are required. A plumber was sent for, and Detective Sergt. Fiaschetti responded.

Raffaele entered the house, Varotta begged for his boy. Raffaele demanded $500, and Varotta passed it to him. The plumber left his plumbing and the cousin from Italy produced handcuffs.

Outside the home, on the sidewalk, Marino and Cusamano were arrested.

The third degree failed to loosen the tongues of the trio of suspects although the utmost pressure was applied to learn the whereabouts of Giuseppe.

Two days after the arrest of the three and two other suspects never convicted, Varotta received a letter purporting to come from those who made the original demands. If it was to be believed, the men under arrest were guilty of no more than extortion of conspiracy to extort and knew nothing of the kidnapers. But the prosecution viewed it as an effort to establish an alibi for Raffaele, Marino and Cusamano and so, too, did three juries.

BOY DROWNED

On June 11, little Giuseppe was found floating in the Hudson river off Piermont. His abductors had carried out their threat. Warrants were issued for John Doe and Robert Doe, the actual slayers. No more definite identification ever has resulted.

Raffaele, Marino and Cusamano, who were in jail when, according to the autopsy, Giuseppe was drowned, were indicted for murder.

Raffaele was tried first. The jury was instructed that if it believed he was one of the kidnapers, and if the kidnapers conspired to murder Giuseppe providing ransom was not paid, he should be convicted of murder in the first degree, being equally guilty of death resulting from the commission of a felony.

The jury so believed and Raffaele was sentenced to die in the electric chair.

Just before Marino was to be tried and on the eve of Raffaele's scheduled execution, Raffaele confessed in the death house, implicating the other two.

But he wouldn't name the two men who actually killed little Giuseppe.

Marino and Cusamano were to be executed the same night, but then Governor Alfred E. Smith commuted their sentences at the last minute in the hope that clemency might cause them to confess and name the actual slayers. They never have.

Home of Lindy's Kin Kept Under Watch

Denver, March 12 (AP)—The Rocky Mountain News says three federal investigators have kept the Denver home of Mrs. S. E. Land, aunt of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, under surveillance several days on the theory that the kidnapers of Lindbergh's son might try to communicate with him through Mrs. Land.

Mrs. Land might be utilized, says the News, as a medium through which ransom could be paid for the return of the child.

Both Mrs. Land and Rowland K. Goddard, head of the U. S. Secret Service here, declined to comment on the case.

1

7-ROOM SINGLE $6500

Merrymount Section of Quincy. A modern frame house with hot water heating system; well located on a finished street, close to the beach. Here is a splendid combination of a winter and summer home. Handy to school and playground. Has 7500 sq. ft. of land.

BANK REPRESENTATIVE,
Capitol 2852 or Malden 1863-W

2

West Roxbury—$4500

New Bungalow-Cottage

In strictly single house section. Has five (5) well planned rooms and bath, also large open attic. The heat is steam. Located conveniently to a new school, is easily accessible to churches, stores, etc. In all a charming home. Small down payment from responsible party.

Call Bank representative, Parkway 0287. Bank also offers a beautiful (2) two-family house of 5 and 6 rooms in one of the best sections of West Roxbury.

3

NEWTON
2 APARTMENT

This home was built under the supervision of an architect to make it individual. Outside finish in dipped gray shingles. Private front entrances. Each suite has 6 rooms, including large living room with fireplace. Best oak floors throughout; fine breakfast room; gas stoves; combination porcelain kitchen sink; modern bathrooms; steam heat; 2-car garage; large lot of land on accepted street in good neighborhood; plenty of shade trees; handy location, near Commonwealth Ave. and R. R. station. Builder's original value $15,000. We were compelled to take this house for lumber bill; will sacrifice for $10,000. Has $8000 savings bank mortgage recently placed on this property. $300 down, pay the balance as rent. Friend Lumber Co., 424 Riverside Ave., Medford. Tel. Mystic 5650. Sunday and evenings Mystic 5159.

A Bungalette—$5000

This Charming New Brick Home only 3 minutes from Forest Hills Terminal, yet a bit secluded in a settlement of beautiful single houses. Has 3½ rooms which includes a beautiful living room with California stucco walls and tinted ceilings and an ornate tapestry brick fireplace; a pleasant chamber with tiled bath and shower adjoining; also a well planned kitchen with every known modern convenience—even to electrical refrigeration; heating by hot water plant, and in addition a continuous hot water supply system. The entire house is wire-lathed plus insulation. Gladly shown by appointment.

The Hearst Papers Advocates

1. "Honest Friendship with all Nations—Entangling Alliances with None."—George Washington.
2. Proportional representation in the United States Senate—no State to have less than two Senators.
3. Abolition of the Electoral College,—election of the President and Vice President by plurality vote of the nation.
4. End of Lame Duck sessions. Installation of President and Congress immediately following election.
5. Army, Navy and Aviation—all united under a Secretary of National Defense.
6. Vigorous Federal action under a Secretary of Education to abolish illiteracy in the United States.
7. Federal Sales Tax and Excise taxes to replace the income tax which has degenerated into a racket.
8. FIVE BILLION DOLLAR FEDERAL LOAN FOR PUBLIC WORKS AND TO RELIEVE UNEMPLOYMENT.
9. Construction of Nicaragua Canal for commerce and defense, advocated by Hearst papers since 1895.
10. Acquisition of French and English West Indies as part payment on debts to United States.
11. Selective immigration to admit only those suited for American citizenship and American needs.
12. Deportation of undesirable aliens and extension of preliminary citizenship period to ten years.
13. Modification of Volstead act to permit light wines and beers under Federal regulation.
14. A calendar year of thirteen months of four weeks each, all holidays to fall on Saturday.
15. A five day working week or a six hour working day to provide more jobs and better conditions for workers.

Prosperity Bond Issue Would End Hard Times

The core of our economic maladjustment lies in disturbed human relationships and genuine remedial action must be aimed at improving them.

Specifically, the great need is to return to the ranks of effective consumers vast multitudes of unemployed men and women who are trudging the streets without hope.

Instead of contenting itself to act as a mere cheer leader, the Government can break the deadlock of vicious and continuing unemployment by authorizing a $5,000,000,000 PROSPERITY LOAN for social reconstruction and re-employment of the idle.

By limiting the actual sale of bonds and letting of contracts to a billion dollars a year, the Federal Government with its unmatched credit, CAN STIMULATE BUSINESS WITHOUT ANY DANGER OF OVERREACHING ITSELF. It can taper off the construction program as soon as normal business conditions are restored.

By creating a vista of sustained job-creating activity the Federal Government will help to change the attitude of private business men toward prices and will tend to convince them that a significant turn is at hand.

The prosperity loan has been brought into practical politics this week by the hearings before the Sub-Committee of the Senate Committee on Education and Labor on the La Follette bill (S. 2419) to accelerate public works.

Enlarged public construction in time of depression and unemployment would give purchasing power to those who most need it, the persons who are without employment and other means of support.

Re-employment of the idle will help not only the jobless and their families, but will tend to restore a balance between production and consumption.

The prosperity plan GOES TO THE HEART of the basic economic problem. Already the Federal Government has shown its desire to intervene in the business cycle.

If the Government stops with financing only the financiers, the counter-deflationary reconstruction program may defeat itself.

The underlying need is to restore an economic equilibrium by returning buying power to the unemployed and reviving confidence among the gainfully employed.

THE PROSPERITY LOAN WOULD COMPLETE THE CIRCLE OF GENUINE ECONOMIC RECONSTRUCTION.

Hesitation means further deepening of the depression.

Continued idleness spells irretrievable social loss of the workpower of 8,000,000 men and women.

How can any Representative or Senator go before the people next November without having voted affirmatively on this economically sound proposal?

Senseless Laws Confuse

Chief Justice Pattangall of the Maine Supreme Court tells us that we in New England have lost our high regard for the law.

> "The average citizen," he says, "when he thinks of the law now thinks of the political orgy of law-making which has reached the point where it bewilders, confuses and annoys. He thinks of lawyers and courts as necessary evils."

It's a good preacher who obeys his own sermon. The lawyers are more responsible for the laws than any other class in the community. The sooner they band together to eliminate the senseless laws and the bewildering confusion of legal procedure the sooner will they have no excuse to preach to the rest of us.

Non-Paying Lines

Lester Watson informs the stockholders of the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway that, in order to place the road on a satisfactorily prosperous basis, some of the non-paying lines will have to be eliminated. Twenty-five years ago such an announcement would have started a storm of protest.

Massachusetts clung for generations to the theory that it was the duty of a public utility to provide service even on non-profitable lines if the system as a whole was doing well. Auto competition has changed that. The public can get service out of facilities that did not exist then. Also, they recognize the handicap that competition has placed upon the railways.

People Want Their Beer

Without a dissenting vote, the Massachusetts House of Representatives adopted a bill to permit the manufacture and sale of 4½ per cent beer.

This does not mean, of course, that it is time yet to absorb a long, cool draught and wipe the foam off your handlebar mustaches (if you still wear them).

This is merely a moral or psychological gesture. It doesn't get beer back. But it does mean that the people want it. Or anything that will do away with this fool thing called prohibition.

New York Day by Day -:- By O. O. McIntyre

Purely Personal Piffle

NEW YORK, March 12—Purely personal piffle: I cannot look formal even in full evening dress. Philip Barry writes the cleverest stage dialogue. I employ every possible dodge to evade telephone conversation and spice bean soup with tabasco until I pot out in a sweat.

A midnight group of chattering chorus girls fascinates me. In my entire life I never owned a satisfactory pen. I roar out loud at animated cartoons. Alice Longworth fits her niche in life better than any woman I know. The most placid newspaperman is Keats Speed.

I love to pronounce espionage. And think tranquil is one of the most beautiful of words. For no reason whatever, the Biddles annoy me. I am continually misplacing a sock, and once swigged five gin fizzes in the hot Palm Beach sun, thinking they were lemonade. And did I put on an act!

My only art possession is a Rookwood vase. My father, at 40 seemed terribly old. Several years older, I think myself youthful. The first poet I ever met was Berton Braley. Many who lost all lately present a charm they never had before. The Strand is the most interesting of all main stems.

I can draw a caricature of Arthur William Brown in two strokes. Herb Roth, dining with me once, ordered a minute steak for dessert. And ate it. I'm awed by athletic women and men with Van Dykes. Fellows excruciatingly comical in drinking days seem as flat today as yesterday's waffle.

I enjoy a good show a half dozen times and saw "Sally" at least 20. Just to watch Leon Errol and Walter Catlett clown. A certain cafe attracts often because they serve spun sugar with ice cream. Stories of swamp life grip. Evans Wall writes the best.

My difficulty at teas is in getting rid of a frozen grin. All thrills are anticipatory. Realization means nothing. I have to ask my wife my exact age, destroy all chain letters and my current stage love is Edna Best. I never saw anyone hit by an automobile.

Gallic effusiveness of Paris shopkeepers is hooey, but how I fall for it! A clerk in the Grand Central zone thinks I am Carl Van Vechten and talks about Harlem. I sign all intimate correspondence "Love and Kisses." The feel of cellophone makes me rub my fingers across my teeth. My finest cane is of solid amber, the gift of William Gaxton. The most unusual is a blackthorn, gift of the late Ben Hampton. Roxy is America's greatest showman.

The Broadwayiest crowd is in front of the Hotel Somerset, next to the Palace. An otherwise intelligent friend believes the world will come to an end this year. During a convalescence six years ago I lived for three months abroad and wrote a daily article about New York without seeing an American or an American newspaper. That or starve. Alfred Segal is the best all-around American reporter.

If the first page of a book doesn't interest it is rarely finished, and I expect to be set upon by hoodlums in gas-house districts. Recently sat next to a behaviorist at dinner. He picked his teeth behind a napkin. Captain Blancart, a liner captain, has the sternest expression. When caught in a fib I redden to the ears and laugh off key.

The friendliest radio voice is that of Major Bowes. Nothing makes me feel so sappy as to be asked to look someone in the eyes. Asked what wine I prefer, I say Chablis Moulon 1902. I never tasted it but read of it in a book. Sounds worldly. The most constructive critic I have is Charles B. Driscoll. Three persons who give me more ideas for my column than all others are Ray Long, Courtney Ryley Cooper and Irvin Cobb. Of all spiritual singers I enjoy Roland Hayes most. I've been out at night without my wife but twice in eight years.

I once loaned a program to J. P. Morgan in the next seat in a theater. Returning it, he said, "Much obliged." Flustered, I replied, "I'm well, thanks." The most desolate spot was the public square at San Luis Potosi, Mexico, at twilight. I always turn to follow brunette ladies with white streaks in their hair.

The Graces

A blazing fire in winter, and a garden in the spring,
A bed of pansy blossoms and a tree where robins sing,
Some trinkets in the corners of the little home we keep,
A few brave years of laughter and the tears that all must weep.
'Tis only these we gather through the time we have to live,
As soon as we shall discover these are all that life can give.

Though fame and wealth may lure us; though both of them we gain,
The home must ring with laughter or all the rest is vain.
And love must bid us welcome when all the struggle's done
Or paltry are the prizes our strength and skill have won.
And peace of mind must shield us from pangs of sharp regret
Or an instrument of torture will be anything we get.

So let's give some thought to tulips and the garden in the spring,
Let's take the time to listen when the robin redbreasts sing.
Let's plan the home for laughter, and let's not forget to keep
The faith we shall be needing when it's time for us to weep.
For if there be no friendship, and loved ones cease to smile,
Then neither fame nor fortune for long can be worth while.

The Cost of a Swanky Government
By Claude G. Bowers

IT IS NOT REMARKABLE that Congress should have been a little impatient with the President over his statement to the press regarding economies in the public service. From this time on we may be sure that every statement made has some relation to the coming Presidential campaign.

For ten years the Federal Government has been increasing the cost of running the machinery at an appalling rate. The cost now is enormously higher than in the days of Wilson. All this has come about while the President has been a member of the executive branch of the Government. No serious attempt has been made in ten years to bring the cost of government down to a reasonable figure.

When Governor Smith called attention to the shameless waste three years ago, Mr. Hoover promised a reorganization of the Government to reduce the cost. He did nothing. Then the Democratic House began work through a committee; and then, and only then, did the President send his message to Congress with the observation that something could be done through reorganization.

This smacked of the campaign. But he asked arbitrary powers. He should have made specific recommendations in his message. These would have been sympathetically considered.

The Facts Are Not So Imposing

Just now when the tax bill is announced, with all the hardship on the people it involves, the President makes a statement, not to Congress but to the people through the press, on the economies that have been effected. This statement was intended to convey the idea that the Administration has reduced expenditures for the coming year as much as $365,000,000. The figures are impressive. The facts are not so imposing. Thus, Mr. Byrns, of the Appropriations Committee, says:

> "It is to be regretted that he did not analyse the reduction, for if he had done so it would have appeared that over $340,000,000 of that amount is due to non-recurring items in the the way of construction which is being carried on this year, but which will not be necessary next year."

More to the point is the fact that, with full knowledge of the unprecedented deficit, the Administration, through its departments, submitted a budget which the House has been able to cut to the tune of many millions. The Agriculture Department estimated $49,421,289 more than the House gives it; the Interior Department $12,637,254 more; the Treasury Department $22,010,985, and so on through the list.

"If" They Co-operate!

It seems that the President's statement that the executive department, and the heads under it, are co-operating with the House committee in the work of reorganization and saving is a surprise, not merely to the Democrats but to the Republicans of the House. Will Wood, former chairman of the Appropriations Committee and a robust partisan, does not wax enthusiastic over the President's statement. He says:

> "If these officers (under the President) co-operate with the committee, as the President advises, and Congress will adopt the recommendations of our committee, there will be material savings."

"If" they co-operate! The leaders of the majority in the House have found no co-operation, and it is evident that Mr. Wood has his doubts. They have offered co-operation that has not been forthcoming except in one instance.

But That Is Politics

The President's statement to the press, put beside the keen and carefully prepared analysis of Mr. Byrns, is sadly devastated.

But that is politics.

And the millions of Americans who are to be burdened unmercifully with taxes to meet the deficit are not so much interested in the political duel as in getting some results that make for economy. The duplications in the departments, the multiplicity of bureaus and commissions, the expenditure of enormous sums on silly things like the issuance and distribution of the Agriculture Department's pamphlet on the love life of the frog, are creating a governmental burden that the people cannot bear.

Millions are being spent on work that does not belong to the functions of the Federal Government. It is not the business of a government, for example, to instruct the people on the raising of chickens. It recently required three pages of the Congressional Record to record the names of pamphlets, issued at a heavy cost by the Agriculture Department, that serve no purpose remotely commensurate with the expense.

The whole trend for years has been to impose unreasonable and intolerable burdens on the taxpayers to maintain the Government. It was not the thought of the founders of the Republic that the people should exist to maintain government. It was the theory that government exists to serve the people.

Solons Should Act at Once

The constitutional amendment to abolish lame-duck sessions of Congress has now been placed before the Massachusetts Legislature with the urgent approval of the Governor of the Commonwealth.

There is no real or obvious reason why the Legislature would not ratify the amendment.

It is simple in purpose. It provides that the members of the national Congress shall begin their public work two months after they are elected instead of waiting until a year has elapsed, as is now the case. It will do away with the notorious lame-duck sessions in which the laws and policies affecting the people of the United States have been enacted by public officials who have been repudiated by the people of the United States.

The anti-lame-duck amendment was adopted by overwhelming majorities of both branches of Congress, in which partisanship was swept aside by common consent. The same spirit should prevail in this matter in our State Legislature. We expect it will.

Dry Law Disrupts Family

In Lynn, the father and mother of 11 children were sentenced to 18 months in jail and fined $2,200 for selling liquor in their home. They appealed and were held in $4,500 bail. Unable to furnish bond, they were put in jail pending trial in the next session of superior court.

Meanwhile, these 11 children, ranging from six to 18 years in age, are thrown upon public and private charity. You can't eliminate all error in human life. But you can reduce it by reducing the means to it. If prohibition were out of the way, this family home would not have been disrupted. At least not by this cause.
